Satellite Will Be Shot Up

Largest Body Ever Sent Up By US

WASHINGTON (AP) — The largest scientific satellite ever launched by the United States will be sent into orbit possibly as early as next Thursday, if hurricane Cleo did not disrupt preparations too much.

This first Orbiting Geophysical Observatory will have the appearance of a huge, ungainly, spindle-legged winged insect—with its assortment of booms, antennas, control jets and the broad solar panels designed to extend into position after the craft is in orbit.

Designated OGO-A, the satellite will carry more scientific experiments than any other satellite to date—29 of them, contributed by scientists from seven government laboratories and nine universities.

It will be aimed for a great looping orbit, ranging from 170 miles above the earth out to 92,000 miles, to gather data on the atmosphere, the magnetosphere and interplanetary space beyond reach of the earth's magnetic field.

The National Aeronatucs and Space Administration, announcing launch plans Saturday, said it will, if successful, "mark another milestone in NASA's program of scientific space exploration.

"It also will inaugurate a series of standardized observatories capable of conducting many related space experiments simulataneously," NASA said.

Five Candidates List Expenses For Primary

Five candidates who received their party's nomination in the August 4 primary election have filed statements of their campaign expenses in the Pettis County Recorder's office. Totals for these first five ranged from $57 up to $524.08.

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, incumbent Democrat, listed the $524.08 with his expenses including $240 for auto bumper strips and the remainder for advertising, printing and the $25 filing fee. Fairfax was unopposed in the primary, but faces former Republican police chief Ralph Hamlin in November.

Eastern County Court Judge E. L. (Red) Birdsong reported he spent $245.23 in winning the Democratic nomination over John W. Gibbons. His expenses included $104 for newspaper advertising and the remainder for various printed materials and filing fee.

C. M. Purchase, judge of the Western District on the County Court, was unopposed and spent $57 for primary campaign expenses. He is a Republican.

Frank W. Hayes, Democrat, unopposed for re-election as judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit, showed expenses of $100, including $50 filing fee to the Democratic state committee and $25 each to two Cooper and Pettis Counties.

Lloyd Farris, Democrat, who was nominated for public administrator over incumbent Dr. F. I. Lawrence, spent $78.40 for advertising, printing and filing fee.

Candidates have until 30 days after the primary election to file reports of their campaign expenses.

Half Tightwad Burns

TIGHTWAD, Mo. (AP)—Half the town of Tightwad burned Saturday afternoon.

Sheriff Wilbur Schmidt said a car backed into a gasoline pump in front of the Parks grocery store and started a fire that quickly turned the weatherbeaten frame building and its stock into a pile of ashes.

A strong south wind whipped the flames, and Tightwad's other store, Wilson's grocery, across Missouri Highway 7 to the south, was not in danger. Tightwad is between Clinton and Warsaw.

No one was injured.

There has been no satisfactory explanation of how Tightwad got is name.

RAVAGES OF STORM — A boat dock was extensively damaged on Lake Murray near Ballentine, S.C., Saturday, after a tornado dipped down, ripping through boats and boat-houses. The boat house, shown, which measured forty by one hundred feet, was moved over one hundred feet with the interior filled with boats. No injuries were reported from the tornado which followed the path of hurricane Cleo. (UPI Telephoto)

Drowns In River

BEAUFORT, Mo. (AP)—Henry Bowman, 57, of St. Louis, drowned Saturday in the Bourbeuse River near here when his boat overturned.

Bowman's brother-in-law, Eugene Mays, 21, also of St. Louis, said they were fishing near Peter's Ford when the boat capcized. Mays swam to shore.

Bowman's body was recovered two hours later about 100 yards downstream.

Kansas City Star Will Support LBJ

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Star, in its Sunday edition announced its support of President Lyndon Johnson in the Nov. 3 election.

It is the first time since it backed Grover Cleveland in 1892 that the newspaper has supported a Democratic presidential candidate. The Star describes itself as politically independent with a policy of moderate conservatism.

"We are convinced that the cause of world peace would be better served by Mr. Johnson and his foreign policy, with its roots deep in both Democratic and Republican administrations," the Star said. "It would be safer to keep his finger on the nuclear trigger than to place the awsome responsibility on Senator Goldwater (the Republican nominee). We frankly fear that the Goldwater philosophy, transformed into presidential policy, might plunge the world deeper into the uncertainty of greater international tensions."

"We believe that to entrust the peace to a Goldwater administration would be an unnecessary gamble for the nation to take," the editorial added.

South Not About To Rise Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — From all the signs, the South is not about to rise again with anything like solidarity against the Johnson-Humphrey ticket.

Those Democrats who run campaigns are not kidding themselves about the difficulties they face in what is becoming a two-party South in national elections.

They already have scratched Alabama and Mississippi from their list of states whose electoral votes they expect in President Johnson's column.

But while they fear the November election news might be bad in Louisiana, South Carolina, Florida, Virginia and Texas, they think they have a fighting chance to keep these states in line.

No small part of this is due to the detailed preparations made by Johnson to smother the civil rights controversy that might have flared into an open revolt and a Dixie walkout at this week's Democratic National Convention.

Both Johnson and GOP presidential nominee Barry Goldwater have expressed hope that civil rights will not be an issure in the campaign.

But they both recognize it is there—either in open opposition to integration or in covert backlash against it—and is likely to remain there.

Johnson took extraordinary measures during the Atlantic City convention to placate all of the party conservatives, including the Southern die-hard segregationists. Those among the latter who came to the convention to get thrown out, and thus publicize their beliefs, found themselves thwarted at every turn.

Johnson took the extraordinary course of directing the National Committee to suspend for 30 days its requirement that members sign a loyalty oath to support the national nominees.

This left Eugene (Bull) Connor, the national committeman from Alabama, no chance to make an issue of it in the final meeting connected with the convention. Connor, who had walked out when he was denied a convention seat, said he was going home to think it over.

Impact Of Holding Is Fading Fast

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The economic impact of the National Farmers Organization's holding action on livestock markets appeared to be fading this weekend.

The NFO's early success in reducing the flow of cattle, hogs and sheep to market sent livestock prices leaping early this week to their highest levels in 19 months at some terminals.

But by week s end, hog and cattle deliveries were back to near normal as farmers rushed to take advantage of the higher prices.

The influx pulled prices down to only slightly above those prevailing when the NFO started its action 10 days ago.

Housewives were finding in some cities that they had to pay a few cents more per pound for meat.

NFO President Oren Lee Staley of Rea, Mo., says these retail price boosts are unjustified at this time, and that retailers are "taking advantage of the situation" created by the holding action.

But most market experts say economic factors would have brought about increases in prices for meat, both on the hoof and at the butcher's counter, regardless of the NFO. Some concede the NFO action may have hastened the trend.

The NFO, by holding meat animals off the market in 23 states east of the Rocky Mountains, is trying to force processors to sign contracts guaranteeing farmers certain minimum price for livestock.

The NFO demands minimums of $22.75 a hundredweight for No. 1 and 2 grade hogs, $32.45 for choice cattle and $29.45 for sheep. Hogs haven't commanded a price that high since 1958.

It's the concensus of meat industry leaders, U. S. Department of Agriculture officials and most farm economists that holding actions do no permanent good, and contain the seeds of their own downfall.

Goldwater Slaps At Foreign Policy

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — In a slap at President Johnson's foreign policy, Sen. Barry Goldwater demanded Saturday that the administration tell the nation "just how deeply we have been involved in the runaway rioting and governmental musical chairs going on in South Viet Nam."

As new civil strife wracked the Communist menaced Southeast Asian nation, the Republican presidential nominee declared:

"The events of the past week have made a mockery of the Johnson administration's attempt to avoid all questions regarding foreign policy. The questions are being asked around the world. The answers must be given even though they prove politically embarrassing."

The Arizona senator fired off the statement from the 83-foot yacht Sundance, cruising near the Santa Barbara Islands. It has been his vacation headquarters since last Tuesday.

Press secretary Paul F. Wagner relayed the Goldwater statement to newsmen waiting at Newport Beach. Wagner said it was written largely aboard the boat and dictated ashore by radio telephone.

Goldwater said there are trouble spots all around the world. He quoted Johnson as having said the United States has 120 foreign policies — one for each nation it recognizes — and demanded the President spell out each of them.

"Whatever they are," Goldwater said, "it is becoming tragically apparent that very few of them are working in the interests of peace or freedom."

The senator said, "We at home as well as those whose lives are on the line in the battle area itself should be told just how deeply we have been involved in the runaway rioting and governmental musical chairs going on in South Viet Nam.

"A full, frank revelation of just what our Viet Nam policy actually is would be welcome," Goldwater said. "It is long overdue.

State Fair Goes Into Its Last Day; Races Highlight

Saturday Attendance Is Up Over Previous Year

The Missouri State Fair enters into its final day of the nine day showing of the 62nd Exposition here, headed for what fair officials say may be a record official attendance. Attendance for Saturday unofficially is above the comparative Saturday last year after the afternoon report. The 1963 full day attendance was 29,429.

At night the Country Music Show will be in front of the grandstand starting at 7 o'clock.

The day will begin with religious services on the fairgrounds, the Protestant services at the grandstand; Catholic services in the Coliseum, Jewish services at the Women's Building, and the Lutheran services at the Highway Gardens. The services will be held from 8.30 until 9:30 a.m. during which hour all other fair activities will come to a standstill.

Sunday Program On Page 5

Completion of the Missouri State Horseshoe Pitching Tournament will be late Sunday afternoon.

State Fair Archery Championship shoot is to be held in the afternoon.

The State Fair gates will be thrown open to the public free at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Open Championship for Bait Casting was won by Baldy Darnay, Kansas City, who took the first place honors for the third straight year.

George Banfield, 16, who won for the third straight year the Junior Championship, came through in the Open division to win the second honors in the Open class. He was one point off from Darnay's score, receiving a 95 while Darnay received a 96.

Dick Hetzel, Kansas City, was the third place winner with a 93. Mrs. Billy Hetzel, who won the women's division with an 84, placed fourth in the open class with an 81.

New Zoning District C-O Is Planned

Zoning Commission To Study Adding Non-Retail Class

Acting in line with the recommendations of Hare & Hare municipal planners, the city's Zoning and Planning Commission is seeking to add another business district classification to the present zoning ordinance—and one application for rezoning under the new designation has already been filed.

The new district would be known as a C-O district, a non-retail business district—including such business operations as offices for doctors, dentists, real estate agencies or attorneys.

"Hare & Hare recommended the new designation because it was felt something is needed between the multi-family and local business districts," Virgil Herrick, chairman of the Zoning and Planning Commission said. "The present ordinance jumps from multi-family district to local business."

In a legal advertisement published for the first time Friday in the Democrat, the commission proposes amendment of the zoning ordinance to establish the C-O non-retail classification. Public hearing on the proposed amendment is set for 7:30 p.m. Sept. 17 in the City Council chambers.

Another legal advertisement Friday notes the application of Albert J. Campbell for rezoning from R-1 (residential or first dwelling house district) to the new C-O district for property located at 617 East 13th Street — west of Bothwell Hospital. Campbell, a local physician, proposes to put his offices at that address, it was learned.

Chairman Herrick pointed out the feasibility of the new zoning designation in noting Dr. Campbell would otherwise have to seek a C-1 (local business) zoning, which could allow construction of a service station or some other business unsuitable to the

Civilian Takes Over In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A civilian with close links to the United States took the reins Saturday as acting premier of South Viet Nam for two months.

The government said that Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, the leader since January, fell mentally and physically ill under the strain fa week of rioting and was under medical care.

In the sixth government change in 10 months, Dr. Nguyen Xuan Oanh, a Harvard-educated economist, assumed temporary leadership by appointment of a military triumvirate that was established Thursday.

Oanh, 45, stressed at a news conference that it was still Khanh's government and he had no plans to reshuffle it.

"He is still the premier," Oanh said. "He is incapacitated. He is not well."

Troops in battle regalia maintained a tight guard around Saigon and other trouble spots to prevent rioting that has been almost unchecked for a week.

At least nine persons perished in the rioting, two Friday, and scores were hospitalized with injuries.

Oanh comes to the fore apparently with full approval of the United States, which is pouring men, material and money into the war against the Communist Viet Cong.

To many American officials, Oanh is affectionately known as Jack Owen. This is a play on the similarity of pronunciation of Oanh and Owen. Oanh speaks fluent, American-style English.

Oanh returned to South Viet Nam before President Diem was overthrown and slain in the coup of last Nov. 1.

Oanh had been away for 16 years. He received his doctorate in economics from Harvard 10 years ago and from 1955 to 1960 was an instructor of economics at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

A Trinity faculty member described him as "a very courteous, friendly guy who was smiling most of the time."

At his first news conference as acting premier, he wore a dark blue suit and smiled confidently throughout. He appeared with members of Khanh's cabinet, among them Information Minister Pham Thai, a Dai Viet party member.

Oanh told the news conference he has no political affiliations.

He said he would work in harmony with the triumvirate of Khanh, Maj. Duong Van Minh and Lt. Gen. Tran Thiem Khiem.

No Increase In County, Road Taxes

Judges of the Pettis County Court this week established the county tax rate for 1964—with no increases made in either the county or road tax.

Presiding Judge C. Berry Elliott had stated previously that there was no need for any tax increase this year. The county budget showed an increase, but valuation in the county was also up.

Rates per $100 valuation approved by the court are as follows: State, 7 cents; county, 47 cents; road, 35 cents; Hughesville No. 11 Road District, 20 cents in excess of regular 35 cent road levy; Boonslick County Library, 10 cents; Good Samaritan Nursing Home, 15 cents.

County Clerk J. H. Green pointed out the new nursing home assessment affects only the southeast part of the county. Bonds for the Benton County nursing home were approved some time back and the tax district coincides with the exception of one farm with the boundaries of the R-1 Benton County School District, which juts into Pettis County.

The various school district tax rates for the year are: Walnut, $1.30; Mosby, $1.95; Liberty, $1.70; Striped College, $2.10; High Point, $2; McVey, $2.25; Sunny Side, $1.30; Tanglenook, $2.50; Georgetown, $2; Camp Branch, $1.25; Bothwell, $1.95; R-1, $1.75; R-4 LaMonte, $2.20; R-5 Hughesville - Houstonia, $2.25; R-6 Smithton, $2.55; R-8 Green Ridge, $2.53; R-7 Dresden, $1.60; 200 Sedalia, $2.82; R-1 Benton County, Cole Camp, $1.85; R-1 Henry County, Windsor, $2.35; Knob Noster, $2; Cooper County 57, Pilot Grove, $2.50.

City levies within the county are: Sedalia, $1.85 (reflecting 35 cent sewer bond increase); Green Ridge, $2; Houstonia, $2.10; Hughesville, $1.75; LaMonte, $2.35; Smithton, $1.90.

Two new alternates named were C. H. Williams, Route 5, first alternate; and Harold Clevenger, Rural Route, Sweet Springs, second alternate.

Class Revolution

Story of Today's Education Involves Dollars, Numbers

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wanted: Someone to care for a child outside the home, six hours a day. Must teach him to read and write, and instruct him in advanced algebra, English literature for a job or entrance to college.

That fictitious want-ad will be answered next month when a record 43.1 million youngsters swarm into the nation's public elementary and secondary schools.

To those 43.1 million in the public schools add 5.5 million in private and parochial schools and 4.8 million in college. These total 53.4 million Americans — 28 per cent of the total population — who are full time pupils or students.

But the story of education today is not only in numbers of pupils or dollars spent educating them.

The story is in the revolution going on in the classroom.

The most spectacular changes have been in curriculum.

One educator observed recently that if the average well-educated American parent can help his child with homework there's probably something wrong with the teacher.

There's the new math, in which first graders are learning about set theory, the binary number system, intersection, function and symbolism.

There's the new physics and the new biology, better courses in high school than college students used to get.

There's the new grammar, based on structural linguistics — and what do you know about structural linguistics, dad?

Courses once reserved for college are showing up in high school programs.

Traditional high school courses are moving down to junior high and below. A new course in economics is being taught to first graders in Elkhart, Ind.

There is a trend toward more depth and content at all levels.

For instance, the most able eighth graders in the Pittsburgh, Pa., public schools this year will be reading Hawthorne, George Orwell's "Animal Farm," and Blanksten's "The United States Role in Latin America."

The move toward more solid subject matter may be seen in the first grade.

Many school systems are discarding the Dick-and-Jane type readers with their "Oh, oh, oh. Look, look, look," and adopting learning-to-read programs with a more sophisticated style, more intersecting stories, and much larger vocabularies.

There have been curriculum reforms in the past, of course. But Dr. Gaither McConnell of Tulane University says this one is different because:

"The nation's outstanding scientists, mathematicians and other scholars are now working with the professional educators in updating and improving the instructional material and are also helping to rewrite the textbooks."

Behind this revolution in the classroom are two generalizations which are being accepted in educational circles: Children are capable of doing much more than they have been asked to do in the past, and children would rather be challenged than bored in school.

—Longer school year. The United States has the shortest school year of the civilized world — an average 180 days.

Two schools in Tallahassee and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., have moved to an 11-month, 220-day school year. In New York State, school districts in New Rochelle, Syosset and Hornell plan a 210-day school year.

—The "new" summer school. This is another way to lengthen the school year. The old idea that summer school was for fun, frolic and remedial work has gone out the window.

—Longer day. Some schools have added an hour or more to the regular school day. Many others have added optional periods before and after school for non-academic activities such as driver education, clubs, chorus and band.

Prof. Dwight Allen of Stanford University believes the school day eventually may run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with all formal homework eliminated.

—Flexible scheduling. Standard practice in American schools is for classes to meet five days a week in 50 or 55-minute classes. A growing number of educators believe this is ridiculous, that 55 minutes is too long for some subjects, too short for others.

—The nongraded program. When mom and dad went to school they took the same courses at the same time, and were expected to cover the same ground, whether they were brilliant, average or slow.

The nongraded program breaks this scholastic lock-step. The program is fitted to the individual. A student's schedule might include remedial English, college level math, an honors program in science, and the regular history course.

No one falls behind and fails, no one gets ahead of the class and becomes bored — two major reasons for high school dropouts.

—Reading clinics. High schools today are finding that some of their students can't really read.

To meet this problem, they are experimenting with reading clinics. Another development is the spread of developmental reading programs, to make average readers good readers, and good readers better.

—Team teaching. From a quiet start at Franklin School in Lexington, Mass., in 1957, team teaching has spread throughout the country. The National Education Association estimates that 30 per cent of all elementary school districts will have team teaching programs by 1965.

A team normally includes three teachers, each doing the job he does best, and non-teaching assistants who handle clerical work and other non-instructional duties. Team members may lecture to large groups, lead small-group discussions, or supervise individual research projects or special instruction.

— Early admission and preschool programs. Some children are two to three years behind their classmates the day they enter first grade. They never catch up; instead, they continue to fall back.

These are children whose home life includes no one to read them a story, or teach them a word. They see no magazines or newspapers. They have no pencils or crayons. They have no vocabulary, except that of the street.

The odds are stacked against these youngsters staying in school, or learning anything if they do.

To overcome this more than two dozen large cities have, or are planning, programs which bring three and four-year-old youngsters into school situations.

— Vocational Education. This vital phase of public education is coming into its own.

Electronics, science technology and dietetics are replacing woodworking, metal shop and home economics. Laboratories are getting bigger and better, and experts are being brought to the classroom as part-time instructors.

— Technology in the classroom. The most recent developments have been in putting educational technology in its proper place in the school program.

Technology is being used for individual study — teaching machines, language laboratories, films which can be shown on small, individual screens.

Whatever the progress, public schools today have found no solution to their biggest problem: the shortage of qualified teachers.

Two recent news releases from California tell the story.

One release noted that no later than September 1965, there will be compulsory foreign language recordings, television and guage study in all sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

The second release noted that only 14 per cent of the elementary school teachers teaching a foreign language in California are fluent in that language.

Weld Provides a Thrilling Finish for Modified Fans

In one of the most thrilling finishes to a modified stock car race for the Missouri State Fair championship, Jerry Weld, of Kansas City, whipped past Bill Utz to snatch the crown in the 50-lap race Friday night on the fairgrounds half-mile track.

The daring Weld threw caution to the winds and went speeding by Utz on the 46th lap to take the elad and finish out front. This all came after Weld, while fighting his way up, sideswiped the concrete safety wall in front of the bleachers, causing him to lose some ground in the 38th lap.

Utz grabbed the lead when he passed Junior Hower of Kansas City, in the 12th lap. Hower then ran second until the 18th when Weld moved into the second spot. He was running almost tailgate to Utz when he smacked the wall twice, but soon had his neavy foot on the accelerator to pick up the distance after going out of the second turn into the back stretch.

Weld who kept dogging Utz all the way had little trouble with his car, while Utz's No. 98 in the 42nd lap began steaming and on the 46th the steam began getting into his face. On the back stretch Weld took advantage of everything and went into the lead after cutting inside going into the number one corner.

It was notable that Utz carried the lead for 34 of the 50 lap race, while Weld carried it for the last four laps — which counted most.

After the winner had coasted to a stop in front of the grandstand and Weld climbed out of his car, Kenny Austin had made one more lap around the track and was coming down the straight-of-way and was untabel to stop. Just before reaching the point where Weld's car was stopped the right rear wheel and axle came off his car and it rolled to the fence on the infield side of the straight - of - way. Luckily, fans had not crowded on to the track as is the usual custom when the feature race ends and no one was struck.

The championship 50-lap race finish saw Weld first; Utz, second; Bud McCune, Laclede, third; Wes Ferrand, Kansas City, fourth; Junior Hower, Kansas City, fifth; Donnie Cooper, Sedalia, sixth; and Jack Belk, Joplin, seventh. No time was registered, due to running on the warning flag for seven laps. Including the warning laps it actually took 25:52.07 minutes.

Lieutenant D. S. Gehrig, of the State Highway Patrol, Lee's Summit presented the trophy.

Two 10 lap Class B races were held as preliminary events.

The first race went to Tom Maycock, first; Dee Sellers, Rich Hill, second; Roy McKenzie, Brookfield, third; Keith Ollison, Sedalia, fourth; and Bill Bowling, Carrollton, fifth. No time.

Missouri Class B Championship race — 15 laps: Tom Maycock, first; David Gauldin, second; Roy Hibbard, third; Jack Hart, fourth; and Don LaRue, fifth; No time.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has fired another underground low yield nuclear test shot at its Nevada Testing Grounds.

The Atomic Energy Commission announced Friday's firing — which had an explosive equivalent of less than 20,000 tons of TNT — and said it was the 14th weapons related test this year by the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Department will give Christmas mailers this year a choice of four shades of green 5-cent postage stamps. It is the first time in philatelic history that a four-in-one issue had been offered the public, the department added.

A 100-stamp sheet, the department said, will contain 25 stamps of each design — a sprig of holly, mistletoe, pine cones and poinsetta.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has spent $32 million to help 177 communities set aside more than 100,000 acres for recreational and scenic use under the Open Space Program established by Congress in 1961.

The Urban Renewal Administration said Friday that states, cities and other local governments contributed about $90 million in the program which permits the federal government to pay up to 30 per cent of the cost of acquiring undeveloped land.

He's Assigned To Tour USA Making Talks

It's working out that way for 42-year-old Richard G. Johnson, a senior U.S. Foreign Service officer who left with his wife and two children Thursday on a motor trip to San Francisco sponsored by the State Department.

Announcing the tour, the department said the only cost for Johnson, who is home on leave, will be for food, highway toll charges and incidentals.

Along the way, while renewing his acquaintance with this country, he will make speeches explaining the work of the Foreign Service.

The major costs are being borne by the Wally Byam Foundation and the Ford Motor Co. The foundation is furnishing the department with three house trailers for two years and Ford is providing three automobiles to tow the trailers at an annual cost of $1.00. The foundation is supplying gasoline and oil for the cars, the State Department said.

In San Francisco, Johnson will turn the car and tralier over to another Foreign Service officer who will drive his family on the return trip east while the Johnsons will fly back to Washington to prepare for a new assignment, in Brussels, Belgium.

The Johnson trip is the first in a new State Department enterprise set up under the "community relations program." The purpose is to get returned Foreign Service officers to make speeches around the country when they are on home leave and allow them to see as much of the United States as they can.

State Department officials say that one of the frequent criticisms of the Foreign Service by members of Congress is that diplomats who spend most of their lives abroad lose touch with the American people.

Johnson, a native of New Haven, Conn., has served in European and African posts since 1947. He just returned from an assignment at NATO headquarters in Paris. His speaking schedule has not been announced.

New Business Bustle For Latin Nations

PANAMA (AP) — Harvard's Graduate Business School set up shop recently in an ancient Guatemalan colonial capital and 50 Central American businessmen responded with $1,000 each for a six-weeks course — in English.

From Guatemala to Costa Rica, scores of specialists gather in no less than 20 regional offices every working day to study, chart and apply formulae for social and economic development.

In San Jose, a textile dealer packs a briefcase, catches a post-breakfast flight to El Salvador, completes his mission and takes the evening plane home in time for dinner.

The siesta is giving way to zeal; blood and bullets are being replaced by banks and bustle in the quiet rebellion against social-economic stagnation and archaic nationalistic concepts.

At the heart of this new surge is the Central American Common Market through which Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica — and probably Panama later on — are striving for economic integration, and survival.

Although the project has been 12 years in the making and is considered past its most difficult formative stages, its backers are reluctant to predict just how far integration will go. Full economic integration is scheduled for 1966. A common currency is envisioned in five years. Political integration remains an intriguing thought.

This type of agricultural economy makes the area vulnerable to usually fluctuating world prices. Industrialization is regarded as the only solution to the problem and this is the basic reason for tht Common Market.

The way to achieve economic integration is through the removal of import taxes on goods produced locally and the imposition of high tariffs on imports from outside the market. This means manufacturers have to move into the area to make their products competitive.

The area's total exports rose from $285 million in 1950 to about $500 million in 1963. The combined economies have been growing at an annual rate of about 4.5 per cent against a 3.5 per cent birth rate. Average per capita income is about $220 for the area and growing.

Junior Bait Casting Event At The Fair

One of the top events on the fairgrounds Friday was the Junior Bait Casting Tournament which was dominated by the three children of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Vollmar, 6995 Washington, St. Louis. Lewis Vollmar, Jr., placed second in the tournament with 91 points; Linda Vollmar, 16, was third with 90 points, while Vicki Vollmar, eight years old, displayed her art at casting and crowded out several older contests and took fifth place with a 72 point score.

George Banfield, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Banfield, 1843 East 76th Street, Kansas City, successfully defended his 1962 and 1963 championship honors. Young Banfield piled up 96 points out of a possible 100 to win.

Tom Heuertz, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Heuertz, Kansas City, took fourth place with a score of 89.

Vicki, throughout the tournament and her turn at the line, had a smile which won the crowd around the casting pool and placed her a favorite. She was displaying a dogged determination to win with each cast.

There were ten children entered, the winner receiving a trophy and the first three won ribbons. The tournament is sponsored by the Conservation Commission and radio station KDRO of Sedalia.

The champion will relinquish his title next year as he advances to the Open Class with men and women over 16.

In the dairy cattle department Herdsman Special award went to Johnny Wallis of Springfield, Mo. He was presented the Ernest Selken Memorial trophy.

Mrs. E. M. Foerster, of Jefferson City, in the Floriculture—Amateur Artistic Classes won the Sweepstakes Rosette having won the most total points of the show.

The 1964 rabbit show attracted much interest this year and was one of the largest held at the fair in years. Twelve breeds of rabbits were exhibited by breeders from five states. W. E. Molen, Kansas City, had the best breed of American Checkered Giants in the heaviest class, a 15-pound Senior Checkered giant doe.

Smallest rabbit of the show was a Black Dutch which won its best of breed honors. It was owned and shown by Gene Loveland of Lee's Summit and weighed two pounds.

Best in New Zealand White entry of Ben Elliott, St. Joseph, was first.

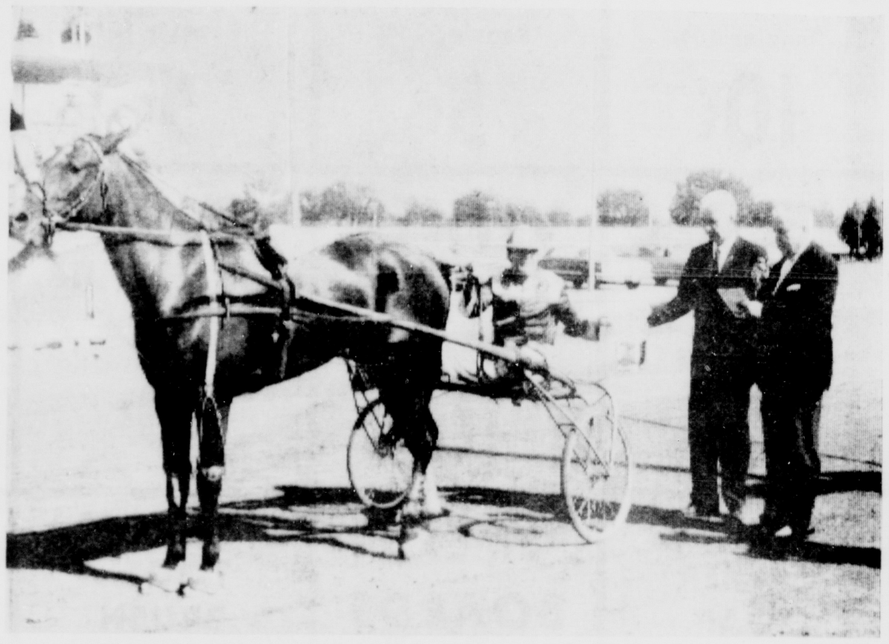

Mrs. Maxine Griggs, Sedalia, had both the Best and Reserve Best in the English Spotted rabbits.

The Fishers of Kansas City won the Best of the California breed.

Dana Molen, student in the Mississippi Military School, showed the Best in the Satin Rabbit Class, and it was his third year at the Missouri fair. He is the son of W. E. Molen

THE MISSOURI State Fair Horse Show which was named an honor club last year by the American Horse Show Association completed its 7 day stand Friday night with a closely contested five gaited saddle horse championship stake. WILLIAM L. HUNGATE, democratic candidate for Congress in the 9th district, presents the Missouri State Fair trophy to Mimar, winner of the Free For All trot at the fairgrounds track Thursday afternoon. Despite losing the first heat to Edgewood Valley, who set a season record of 2:03 2/5, Mimar came back to take the second heat while Edgewood Valley finished sixth. Mimar's owner, W. R. Marquis, Waunakee, Wisc., collected a purse of $1,500.

World News In Brief

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government agreed today to allow U.S. nuclear powered submarines to call at Japanese ports.

The matter has provoked considerable controversy among the Japanese, and their government has been debating the issue for a year and eight months.

To pacify the public, the U.S. Navy has promised the submarines will not carry nuclear tipped rockets.

The Navy says it asked for permission to dock the submarines so that crews can go ashore for leave.

There were no immediate indications when the first nuclear powered submarine would arrive.

WAIDHAUS, Germany (AP) — Two 21-year-old Czechoslovaks rammed a truck through Communist border barriers today and escaped to West Germany under heavy Red fire, German police reported.

The two escaped at Rozvadov, main border crossing point between Czechoslovakia and West Germany.

LONDON (AP) —British archeologists report they have made "sensational" discoveries in the area in Egypt soon to be flooded by the Aswan High Dam.

The annual report of the British Academy said Thursday the finds included the tomb of a bishop of the 14th century A.D. and details about Egyptian forts which existed 20 centuries before the birth of Christ.

The report said the bishop's tomb was found in the fortified town of Kasr Ibrim, once the southernmost frontier of the Roman Empire.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Philippines reached agreement in principle Thursday on a treaty to avoid double taxation.

The treaty assures American companies which pay taxes in the Philippines that they will be given a credit on the payment of taxes owed to the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has been accused of making excessive living-quarter allowances to civilian employes in Japan which in 1962 averaged 40 per cent above allowable expenses.

A report Thursday to Congress by the comptroller general's office said some of the employes received "windfall profits."

It also said that the Air Force granted the maximum prescribed rates for living quarter allowances for civilian employes in foreign areas even when regulations required reductions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal tax collections reached a record of $112 billion during the fiscal year that ended June 30.

During the last four months of the period, the income tax cut was in effect. But most of the taxes collected during this period were on 1963 income, so they did not reflect any substantial impact of the tax cut.

Treasury officials said it will be impossible to assess the full effect of the tax cut until taxes on 1964 income are collected next April 15.

MRS. W. L. WHITTALL, Green Ridge, Mo., president of the Green Ridge Garden Club, poses with the first-place trophy awarded the Club for the best collection of eight arrangements. Her club was entered in a special advanced invitational class open only to last years' top winners. Entrants were required to display one mantle, one table, two niche and four bench arrangements.

Stu's Unity Efforts Put Him In Spot

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said Thursday he has ended up in the middle trying to bring peace and unity to the Democratic party in Missouri.

Speaking to a St. Louis audience over radio station KMOX from Atlantic City, Symington denied he indirectly had urged J. Burleigh Arnold to retire from the Missouri State Democratic Committee.

"This story is totally incorrect," he said, referring to reports earlier this week that he had sent his top assistant, Stanley Fike, to ask Arnold to withdraw from the committee race.

Arnold, vice president of the Central Missouri State Trust Company in Jefferson City, plans to seek re-election to the committee at the 8th Congressional District Democratic Committee meeting Tuesday in Rolla.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Sec. of State Warren E. Hearns, has charged that Arnold is a member of the so-called "establishment" that has dictated party policies and handpicked party candidates for years.

Arnold supported Hearnes' primary election opponent, Lt. Gov. Hilary A. Bush. So had the establishment, Hearnes said.

"I suggested that Hearnes not take it out on anyone who opposed him in the primary campaign," Symington said. "Hearnes told me he wanted to be in the position to say he opposed two or three people in the so-called establishmtnt. This was completely understandable to me."

Both Hearnes and Republican gubernatorial candidate Ethan Shepley attacked the establishment in their primary campaigns. Shepley intends to make it a major issue in the months prior to the Nov. 3 general election.

New Europe Rising

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

Twenty-five years ago next Tuesday, Sept. 1, 1939, Hitler marched on Poland. Three days later Britain and France came to the aid of Poland, and Europe once again plunged into war. When the holocaust ended six years later, the old Europe was gone.

In its place, a quarter of a century later, the new Europe is rising. On the surface, at least, the antagonisms and the territorial jealousies of 1939 are gone, and Europe is being drawn together by many ties of mutual advantage. As Europe draws close together, American influence has waned.

Words like France and Germany are becoming old-fashioned so far as business and politics are concerned. Statesmen no longer speak of creating a "united Europe," they speak simply of creating "Europe." Only if they build a tightly-integrated continent, they are convinced, can it have the world influence it deserves.

Quarrels about provinces and colonies that excited politicians 25 years ago sound like ancient history in the Europe of today. Political leaders spend much more time trying to sell strawberries or steel to their historic enemies, or deciding how much foreign aid money their taxpayers will send to new nations that were once the colonies they owned or coveted.

The Iron Curtain is still down across the center of Europe, but it is rusty in many spots. Behind the curtain are the provinces of Silesia, Pomerania and East Prussia, now marked on the map as "under Polish administration." It was from here that Hitler marched. But in the atomic age, is this still a prime recipe for war? It seems unlikely.

Today, Western Europe is united in NATO, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, with 15 members reaching from the United States and Canada all the way to Greece and Turkey. Economically, six big nations, traditional business enemies, have united in the Common Market. France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg have made great progress in a joint approach to the problems of coal, steel and atomic energy. Their goal is to make the area a single economic unit — a great common market like that of the 50 American states, and almost as productive.

By 1966, if all goes well, they will have no tariff walls against one another, and a single tariff wall — a low one — against goods from outside countries. Even more important, they hope to have uniform farm prices and farm policies, and a system of making major economic decisions for the whole area by a weighted majority vote — against the interest of any one member if necessary.

The European Free Trade Association unites seven other countries on the edges of the Common Market: Britain, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Portugal, Switzerland and Austria. They are also working toward the razing of all internal tariff walls in 1966.

Advocates of a "big Europe", like West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, are looking for a way to bring these two organizations together.

Nor do efforts at unity stop at the Iron Curtain. President Charles de Gaulle of France says he wants to see Europe united "up to the Ural Mountains" — that is, including European Russia. He does not say how this should be done.

The closest East-West contacts come through trade, which both sides are eager to promote, and by cultural contacts on which Europeans set great importance. West Germany will not recognize the existence of East Germany when it is a question of exchanging diplomats or signing treaties. But trade is another matter — the two Germanys do half a million dollars' business every year.

For 18 months the West Germans have been busy setting up trade missions in the capitals of East Europe, though they have no diplomatic relations with them.

Britain, having given up its empire, would like to keep its ties with the Commonwealth and with the United States. At the same time it feels drawn to continental Europe. It may mean something that the long-deferred tunnel under the English Channel now has a good chance of being built.

France has also lost an empire, but under De Gaulle it is making an active try at leadership on the European continent. This means keeping Britain out of European organizations, and an urge to revise the whole Atlantic alliance.

West Germany and France are trying to end their old enmity. At the same time, West Germany wants to stay on good terms with Britain and some smaller nations, who fear a French-German attempt to run the continent.

These cross-currents have slowed the progress of the Common Market. But they do not signify the kind of conflict that leads to war.

The threat of war, many experts think, lies to a greater extent in the existence of heavily armed forces of the Soviet and Atlantic blocs camped face to face across the Iron Curtain. The Communists say this danger could be reduced by thinning out the forces in central Europe, or pulling them back altogether. The favored proposal in the West is to set up observation posts — Communist observation posts to the west of the curtain, Western posts to the east.

So far, each side has reached cooly to the other's proposals, but they are not irreconcilable. The disarmament talks in Geneva are still going on. As long as there is talk, Europe hopes.

In the words of Winston Churchill, Europeans seem to be deciding that "jaw, jaw, jaw is better than war, war, war."

One Threat To Peace Is Eased

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — One threat to the nervous peace on Cyprus eased Saturday as Turkey agreed to delay for a short period sending replacement troops to its Cyprus garrison.

But there was no easing of the basic crisis. Archbishop President Makarios went to Egypt seeking military and diplomatic support from President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Four jet fighters, believed to be Turkish reconnaissance planes, roared over this island. And in Turkey there were anti-American and anti-Greek demonstrations for the third day in a row.

Police used clubs to fight back about 2,000 demonstrators in Ankara as they tried to march on the American, Greek and Soviet embassies. The Greek Embassy was stoned. At least one person was injured and several were arrested.

A crowd estimated at more than 5,000 assembled at the University of Istanbul for anti-American speeches. Then, led by students, it marched through the main business district, where Western consulates are located. Members carried placards and banners reading "Yankees, go home," "ugly American Johnson," and "if you have a friend like America it's equal to an enemy."

They ignored warnings by Turkey's interior minister that demonstrations are illegal.

Turkish public opinion has been aroused by newspaper reports of alleged American requests for Turkey to accept a solution to the Cyprus problem which would include joining Cyprus to Greece. American officials have been silent about Cyprus talks being held in Geneva.

Glafcos Clerides, acting Cyprus president, accepted the Turkish troop rotation postponement with cool reserve, saying, "If this is only temporary, it does not solve the problem, which will crop up again in a few days."

Assault Charge Filed Following Stabbing Of Man

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Felonious assault charges were filed Saturday against 2 women, arrested after Dr. Richard W. Reid was found stabbed and seriously wounded in his combination office and residence Friday night.

The women were Mrs. Delilah Fern Wilson, 33, a waitress, and Mrs. Judy Keilbarth, 17, a clerk, both of Springfield. Floyd Robards, chief of detectives, said the younger woman had given officers a statement, but he declined to release it to newsmen.

The victim, a 50-year-old osteopath, was stabbed in the stomach and the chest and had suffered a laceration on one arm.

Detectives said the women were arrested soon after the stabbing, being pointed out to a cruising officer as the "two women who just stabbed a man." Police said one of them was carrying a newly acquired butcher knife.

Dr. Reid was reported in satisfactory condition.

Civil Defense And Air Patrol Down To Work

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — About 250 Civil Defense and Civil Air Patrol members throughout the state got down to work Saturday on CD procedures in the event of a nuclear attacks.

They pretended that 250 megaton nuclear bombs had been dropped on Kansas City and St. Louis, the missiles killing all persons in a five-mile radius of the hits and damaging areas within a 30-mile radius of the blast.

Airplanes were sent to various points, Waverly, Sweet Springs, Sedalia and Climax Springs to check fallout levels, while mobile radio units were sent to Sedalia, Columbia, Mexico, Vichy, Fulton, Camdenton, Tipton and Freeburg.

Part of the exercise Saturday involved evacuation drills and decontamination procedures on planes at the Jefferson City Memorial airport.

The weekend exercise, which began Friday night, will end Sunday.

Painting at the Buena Vista Home includes the main house, chapel, garage and fence around the yard and barn lot.

New Zoning

predominately residential area there.

Herrick indicated there is a feeling within the Zoning and Planning Commission of a need for a medical area near Bothwell Hospital. This proposed C-O rating would apparently clear the way for such moves, but on the other hand Herrick says the new classification would not be allowed to become a "spot zoning" measure.

The zoning ordinance as it is now written provides for these classifications: R-1, First Dwelling House District; R-2, Second Dwelling House District; R-3, Apartment House District; C-1, Local Business District; C-2, General Business District; C-3, Highway Business District; C-P, Planned Business District; M-1, Light Industrial District; M-2, Heavy Industrial District.

The commission is also advertising the applications of KDRO Radio Station and Thompson Hills Investment Company for the rezoning of the station's property and the new Thompson Hills shopping center under construction. Both were brought into the city limits in April when annexation moved the border one-half mile west between 16th and Main Streets.

State statute provides that new area brought into cities where Zoning ordinances exist be admitted as R-1 (residential) districts. KDRO and Thompson Hills thus makes application only to provide for their businesses. The KDRO application requests a zoning change to M-1 (light industrial) and the Thompson Hills request seeks a change to C-3 (highway business).

Herrick said it is hoped the light industrial zoning for the new city area north of Highway 50 would be attractive to light industries.

Hearings on the KDRO, Thompson Hills and Dr. Campbell applications are also set for Sept. 17.

Stolen Kiss Is Not Worth $35,000 Says Superior Court Jury

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Just because a whiff of perfume fanned Gaylord Richards' ardor to flame, that's no reason he should pay $35,000 for the kiss he stole from the fragrant woman who wore it, says a Superior Court jury.

The seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated an hour and 15 minutes Friday, then returned a unanimous verdict against Mrs. Catherine Looney, 33, of Malibu.

Mrs. Looney, a worker in the Garrett Corp. Aerospace plant in Torrance, had asked $35,000 damages for physical and mental suffering she claimed she suffered in 1962 when Richards seized her and kissed her.

Richards, 45, now of Rockford, Ill., was a Garrett plant guard at the time. He contended that Mrs. Looney had doused herself with irresistible perfume and that his embrace and kiss were brief and light.

Richards' wife, Bonnie, 35, said she doesn't mind if her husband gives other women a "friendly kiss" and that was the kind he gave Mrs. Looney.

After the jury ruling in favor of Richards, Mrs. Richards gave him a kiss. A friendly one. For nothing.

Accidents

Lynn Ratje, 722 East Tenth, received first and second degree burns over his neck, arms and chest, when a car he was priming backfired, it was reported. Ratje is employed by a service station at Broadway and Ohio.

He was taken to Bothwell Hospital for treatment and was later admitted.

Twenty-three-month-old Stephen Goss, Mora, received a compound fracture of the skull in a tractor accident Friday afternoon. He was brought to Bothwell Hospital where he was treated by Dr. Robert Glass who later performed emergency surgery on the boy.

His condition was listed as "good" by hospital authorities Friday night. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Goss, Mora.

The intersection of Broadway and Herold was the scene of a two-car accident at 9:10 a. m. Saturday.

Involved were a 1959 Chevrolet parked by Robert T. Elliot, Nevada, and a 1959 Chevrolet, driven south on Osage by the Rev. Bert A. Pugh, 79, Ewing, Mo.

Damage was to the left rear of the station wagon.

Gary Friedly, 22, Versailles, sustained second degree burns on his hands, third degree burns on his left arm and severe burns on the lower portion of his body, following an explosion and fire at Kidwell's Inc., Versailles. The explosion occurred about 4 p. m. Saturday.

Friedly was taken to Bothwell Hospital from the Gunn Clinic in Versailles in a Kidwell ambulance. He was treated by Dr. Robert Glass at the hospital and admitted.

According to reports the explosion and fire was touched off when a butane torch which Friedly was using swept by a barrel of a pitch-like compound used to coat vaults. The barrel exploded, spraying Friedly with the substance and reportedly setting fire to him.

The explosion was heard over a wide area of Versailles and R. V. Williams, proprietor of the Williams Lumber Company, which is next door to the Kidwell firm, grabbed a hose and extinguished the fire prior to the arrival of the Versailles Fire Department.

Friedly has been employed by the Kidwell firm for approximately two years.

Emergency Proclamation Is Issued

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor James H.J. Tate issued Saturday an emergency proclamation ordering all unauthorized persons off the streets in a 125-block North Philadelphia area torn by Negro rioting which left more than 100 stores looted and nearly 300 persons injured or arrested.

Then Tate went on television to urge cooperation with the proclamation — issued under an 1850 law which subjects violators to a penalty of up to two years imprisonment.

Tate told the people in his brief television address that when the outburst occurred Friday night, it grew so quickly it was physically impossible for police to arrest all looters. He said the situation has now been corrected with more manpower being brought into the area.

The mayor said 1,400 policemen were assigned to the area Saturday night, and that 300 state policemen are on call if needed. He said the FBI is investigating the possible involvement of other persons outside the city and state.

"We recognize this as an outbreak of hoodlums who do not want to obey the law," said Tate.

He said the proclamation was invoked on a 24-hour basis until further notice.

Overshoots Runway

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A chartered Bulgarian airliner overshot the runway at Schwechat Airport here Saturday but none of the 89 persons aboard was injured. The plane smashed through a fence and came to rest in a field 600 yards from the end of the runway and suffered some damage. Most of those aboard, airport officials said, were Austrian vacationers on a flight home from Varna, on the Black Sea coast.

Lot Has Happened Since Revolt

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP) — It's been more than a year since Cambridge was caught up in the first wave of what has since been called the Negro revolution.

A lot has happened since.

The streets no longer are filled with Negro demonstrators, the Maryland National Guard no longer is keeping the peace and there no longer is the sound of gunshots.

Cambridge sits warily astride serenity.

Charles Cornish, the Negro president of the five-man City Council, says it's because of the passage of the Civil Rights Act.

The city attorney, C. Awdry Thompson, says, "It's up to the national civil rights leaders; if they want something to happen, it will happen. If they don't it won't."

Another explanation given is the prolonged absence of Mrs. Gloria Richardson, who led the turbulent civil rights struggle here and who, more than anyone else, is held responsible by the whites for the earlier crises.

Mrs. T. N. Booth, Mrs. Richardson's mother, says her daughter is in Newark, N.J.

A civil rights law, as Cornish points out, has been enacted, and it forbids racial discrimination in most restaurants.

Open accommodations was a prime target of Negroes a year ago. And yet local Negroes are taking no advantage of the law's provisions now.

In the first days after the bill's enactment there were tests by civil rights workers, and with the exception of a restaurant whose owner said his income was derived largely from beer sales, the Negroes were served without fail.

But white restaurant owners say they have had no Negro trade since. They point to this in support of their contention that the racial crisis here was brought on by "outside agitators."

Stanley Wise, a lieutenant in Mrs. Richardson's Cambridge Nonviolent Action Committee, says only "we're concentrating on schools and jobs now."

In a county designated as an economically distressed area, Negroes have been especially hard hit. The unemployment rate among Negroes has been twice that of whites.

Two job retraining programs have been started in the past year, one under the Area Redevelopment Administration, the other under the Manpower Development Training Act.

The third major Negro grievance was school segregation — in the case of Dorchester County, the five lower grades remained segregated after seven years of one-grade-a-year integration.

Last fall the School Board dropped the barriers in the last five grades, but retained its policy of requring parents to request in writing the transfer of their children to another school.

Now the leaderless Cambridge Negroes seem much as they did before it all began.

A white official predicts, "if you come back five years from now, it'll be the same as it was five years ago."

Cleo Leaves Oddities In Damage Path

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — An airplane flew without a pilot, a man sunk his boat in a swimming pool to protect it and a group of children had an ice cream party because of Hurricane Cleo.

In Miami, a twin-engined DC3 apparently took off from Opa-Locka Airport as Cleo swirled by. Nobody saw the flight, but the plane cleared several obstacles that could have been avoided only by traveling up.

"She just snapped her ropes and took off," said maintenance man Brian MacDonald. "All that wind rushing under the wings creates lift, and that's all you need to fly."

In West Palm Beach, a young suburbanite dropped his motor boat into his backyard swimming pool to protect it from Cleo's 100-mile winds, a trick fishermen learned centuries ago when they sunk their craft into lagoons and rivers at the approach of bad weather. Then, as now, it works.

A West Palm Beach housewife inadvertently stocked up on a freezer full of ice cream the afternoon before Cleo struck. Her power went out and the ice cream threatened to drip all over the kitchen.

Instead, she hauled it out and gave the neighborhood children an ice cream party.

In Delray Beach, a veteran of World War I said Cleo was "worse than Argonne." The man, C. J. Hidet, 72, is custodian at the drive-in theatre and lives at the bottom of the huge, extra wide screen in a four-room apartment.

Cleo ripped the screen apart bit by bit, hurling 4x4 wood beams through the ceiling of Hidet's apartment. "I just kept retreating from room to room as the beams came through the ceiling," he said. "This was my first hurricane and I hope it is my last."

In Miami, two trusties at the Dade County Jail were assigned mopping up duties after Hurricane Cleo, and took advantage of the confusion to escape — barefooted.

Close Bond Issue

NEOSHO, Mo. (AP)—A $147,000 bond issue for an airport was approved by 24 votes.

A count of the absentee ballots last night in the Thursday special election showed 2,488 votes in favor and 805 against, with a two thirds majority required for the general obligation issue.

The city's money will be augmented by $134,000 in federal funds and $10,000 in state funds for the airport, which will be on the old Ft. Crowder reservation. It will replace a grass strip port which has been in use here for 34 years.

Elderly Hit Hardest By Encephalitis

The number of suspected encephalitis and encephalitis-like cases has soared to 368 — up 52 in 24 hours.

A 75-year-old man died Thursday, raising the rupposed encephalitis toll to 17.

Dr. C. A. Pigford, city health officer released figures which show all fatalities are in the older group.

Five were in their 50s, three in their 60s; eight in their 70s, and one was 90.

Although two-thirds of the suspected cases reported so far among persons under 50, no deaths have been reported among them.

The epidemic is still at its peak, Dr. Pigford said. Meanwhile, the battle against mosquitoes, which spread the disease, is continuing throughout Houston.

Confirmed cases also have been reported in Florida and suspected cases are under investigation in Illinois and Arizona.

Dick Hutcherson Wins Stock Race

The Missouri State Fair Late Model Stock Car Championship 100-mile race was won by Dick Hutcherson of Keokuk, Iowa, Saturday afternoon, but not until after a protest over the win was made by Ramo Stott. The decision was resolved by lap judges who checked the tabulation on the laps, which was made in the presence of both drivers.

But the afternoon was not a complete loss to Stott who set a new mile time trial record not only for the Missouri State Fair dirt track but an unofficial world's record for the mile on dirt. Stott circled the mile oval in :41.34. The world record up to Saturday was :41.62, which was set in 1963 and also held by Stott.

That's not all. Stott not only had the fastest time in the time trials, but he set a lap record, breaking his own mile time trial record, circling the mile during the race in :39.65 and had other lap times of :40.00 and :40.02.

Decision was based on the lap count kept by the judges and it was brought out, Hutcherson made his pass of Stott while Stott was in the pits for a check and gasoline. His pit crew was under the impression Stott had a lap and a half lead over Hutcherson, which did not prove out on the official count.

The cars had to run several laps several times on the yellow warning flag which were counted in the regular race laps, and gave cars an opportunity to "bunch up" in the delay while disabled cars were removed from the track.

The champion, Hutcherson, was presented a beautiful trophy by Secretary of State Warren E. Hearnes, who is also the Democratic candidate for Governor of Missouri. The presentation took place nearly two hours after the completion of the race, this due to a protest over the winner, which finally was solved when the lap records were checked and rechecked.

Finish of the race: Dick Hutcherson, Keokuk, Iowa, first; Ramo Stott, Keokuk, Iowa, second; Bob Reynolds, Edmond, Okla., third; Lenny Funk, Otis, Kan., fourth; Bob Jusola, Minn., fifth; Ole Brua, Albert Lea, Minn., sixth; Dean Huckaby, Kansas City, Kan., seventh; Bill Thomas, Lake Elm, Minn., eighth; Eddie Gray, Jefferson City, Mo., ninth; Vic Elson, Springfield, Mo., tenth. Time, 1 hour, 11: 42.46. No track record.

Members of the team are as follows: pitchers — PeeWee Saylor and Jeanie Tuck; catcher — Linda Bales; first base — Barbara Hazel; second base — Katherine Reid; short-stop — Judy Wilson; third base — Mary Schuler; outfield — Susanne Smiley, Sharon Pummill, Jeanie Pummill, Sharon Vaught, Terry Banks and Wanda Bales. The team was managed by Ernie Dow and coached by Ella Dow. The season record was 12 wins and one loss.

The Houstonia teams had a very successful season with the Men's Town Team, the Girl's Town Team and the Little League all winning first place trophies in tournaments.

Nevergall Wins World Golf Tourney

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Dorsey Nevergall of Pompano Beach, Fla., won the World Senior Golf Tournament 5 and 4 Saturday over Australia's Jack Barkel.

It was the first major golf victory for Nevergall, who sank a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the first hole and was never headed in the 18-hole final of this event for men 55 or older.

Nevergall's game was steady throughout, allowing his opponent only one hole, the 10th, when his drive went into the rough and his next shot into a trap.

Australia In Lead

BAASTAD, Sweden (AP) — Roy Emerson employed an effective net game and Fred Stolle a booming service in giving Australia a 2-0 lead over Sweden in the Davis Cup tennis interzone final Saturday.

Emerson, the Wimbledon champion, defeated Sweden's No. 1 player, Jan-Erik Lundquist, 2-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5. Stolle whipped Ulf Schmidt, 30-year-old semi-retired businessman, 6-4, 6-3, 10-8.

Australia now needs to win only Sunday's doubles or one of the two remaining singles matches Monday to qualify to play the United States in the Challenge Round, at Cleveland Sept. 26-27.

Blockade To Solidify Fight Ban

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The World Boxing Association threw up another blockade Saturday in a move to solidify its ban on the proposed Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston heavyweight championship bout.

Closing its 45th annual convention here, the WBA voted to declare he heavyweight title vacant and expel all principals involved immediately on announcement by the promoters of the date and site of the proposed rematch.

If this happens, President Ed Lassman of Miami Beach, Fla., said the WBA would recommend an elimination series of bouts among the top contenders to decide the new champion.

Following the WBA's refusal Friday to sanction the fight because of violation of the return bout clause, Inter-Continental Promotions announced it would stage the fight anyway, probably in November and at a site to be determined.

Commissioner M. R. Evans of Kentucky, Clay's home state, passed in the voting.

New York and California, two of the 13 states not members of the WBA, have announced they do not want the Clay-Liston bout.

The WBA voted to establish American ratings of boxers in all divisions in addition to the world ratings.

Lassman was named WBA representative of the World Boxing Council meeting in Venice, Italy. The WBA approved Las Vegas, Nev., as the site of the 1965 convention and Tokyo, Japan, as the probable site in 1966.

Frog Jump Staged

BRANSON, Mo. (AP)—Resort promoters in this Missouri Ozarks area staged a frog-jumping contest Saturday and the antics of contestants and their handlers entertained a crowd of several hundred.

The frogs had such names as Barry, Lyndon, Lady Bird, Lester T. Oad, Hester T. Oad and Jester T. Oad, competing for two resort areas.

There seemed to be three sets of rules—one for each side and the third for the judges.

One frog was disqualified on grounds that it had been fired up with moonshine. Then a judge was disqualified because he sampled the moonshine to see if it really was moonshine.

Lester T. Oad finally was declared the champion, going feet 8 inches in three jumps.

Celebrates By Win

VANDALIA, Ohio (AP) — William A. Brauer III of Fond Du Lac, Wis., celebrated his 26th birthday Saturday by breaking 99 of 100 and winning the national doubles championship at the 65th Grand American Trapshoot.

W. C. Everhart of Reno, Nev., a retired Air Force colonel, cracked 98 for second place in the field of 720.

MISSOURI'S NEW modified stock car champion, Jerry Weld of Kansas City, accepts the trophy emblematic of his victory from Lt. D. S. Gehrig of the Missouri State Patrol. Weld dueled for 30 laps with favored Bill Utz of Sedalia, before taking the lead on the 47th lap of the 50 lap race. Starting in the eighth spot Weld slowly worked his way up until he caught Utz, who had taken the lead on the 12th lap. From then on it was a two-car race for the screaming Sedalia and Kansas City fans.

Sports Scraps

By D. KELLY SCRUTON

THE State Fair ends today after a successful nine days, with many exhibitors going home happy with blue ribobns, others disappointed because their entry wasn't quite as good as the winner according to the judges, but in the minds of the losers it was better. This brings up an incident which occurred in the race program Saturday afternoon.

The 27 starters really gave the racing fans that waited thrill for the 100-miler, but as it progressed car after car became disabled with a big percentage crossing the finish line, however. But the finish was marred as to the presentation of the beautiful trophy due to a protest offered by Ramo Stott, of Keokuk, Iowa, over the finish, thinking he had won over his fellow townsman Dick Hutcherson.

A misunderstanding of the announcing of the race apparently led Stott's pit men to belive their man had gained a lap and a half on Hutcherson. But it was brought out it wasn't a full lap, but a half lap and during a pit stop by Stott while the cars continued running on the yellow warning flag. Hutcherson picked up the half lap and passed Stott.

More than two hours was consumed while officials checked, rechecked and rechecked again to determine the winner. This was done in the presence of both drivers and the final decision was that Hutcherson had actually won the race.

Shortly after 6 p.m. the presentation was made by a patiently waiting Secretary of State, Warren E. Hearnes, Democratic candidate for Governor and the beautiful Miss Jennifer Horton, Missouri Queen of Fairs. The presentation took place in front of the Administration Building while passing fair goers gaped at the ceremony, and wondered "why here?" Explanation is easy, there were no more racing fans left on the track or on the grandstand, and track officials suggested it take place elsewhere on the grounds.

Regardless the presentation was a happy one for Dick Hutcherson. It didn't make any difference where it took place as long as he was declared the winner of the race. He had a broad smile when he accepted the trophy from the queen and a gold plated tension wrench from Secretary Hearnes.

Furthermore some 14,000 racing fans were just as happy anyway, trophy presentation or not—they saw a great race and enjoyed every minute of it.

AL SWEENEY, president of the National Speedways, Inc., reported he didn't believe he has had as many successful races in Missouri as the programs held in Sedalia this year. "We have had some attended by larger crowds, we have had some with many cars, but never before have we had so many exciting races.

"We have had so many track duels this years, some for the first place spots while others broke down to racing and battling for positions second, third and fourth, to which drew attention from the actual leader of the event." Sweeney remarked, "and furthermore it has become a sport to the fans to pick out the actual battlers, whether they be in front or back a few spots. They were always fighting for position."

I have known Sweeney for a number of years and his late partner, Gaylord White, who handled the Missouri meets before Sweeney took over, I can truthfully say in all those years, I have never met any sports promoter, Sweeney or White, who enjoyed better relationship with drivers who had entered. This includes drivers of the modified stock cars, late model stock cars, midget racers and the big car racers.

I have my first time to hear a driver make any derogatory remarks against Sweeney and some times the "heat" was on. Sweeney has always worked with the drivers and gave his help to them all whether they were the stars on the track or a fellow whose car could do no better than come in last.

Missouri State Fair secretaries of many years have been most fortunate in having the National Speedways with their sanctioned International Motor Contest Association races. There are promoters and promoters, but we have found the Sweeney group fair all the way to contestants as well as a well-rounded program for the fair.

JUST A REMINDER — One week from this coming Friday, Smith-Cotton High School enters the football season for 1964, playing the Marshall High School Owls there this year. It's the opener where Coach Dick Rees charges will get their first taste of competitive action.

Although fair week had a few boys out of practice because of working, etc., the coach has been more than pleasantly surprised with the turnout of material. As a whole Rees is happy over the prospects.

The season tickets will be on sale the day school begins and it is hoped the local grid fans will respond so greatly they will fill the stadium at each of the five home games on tap.

Missouri Racing Classic Is Today

There are probably more race cars in Sedalia today per capita of population than there are in Indianapolis on Memorial Day for the running of the famed "500."

For today the Missouri State Fair will have its own racing classic, the Missouri Futurity, which in the 10 years it has been run has grown to be one of the major automobile races of its kind in the United States.

Approximately two score speedway type cars and their drivers will be on hand at 1 p.m. today when time trials begin on the one mile speedway, site of more world records for varying distances than any other like speedway in the country.

Among the favorites will be Gordon Woollery, Waco, Tex., 1963 IMCA champion, who will drive the Offenhauser-engined speedster owned by Roy Thomas, Springfield, Mo.

A definite dark horse on a track where the Offy has long been king will be Jim Moughan, 1963 IMCA rookie of the year. Moughan, of Springfield, Ill., will drive the Lyle Hyneman Offy.

Another strong challenger will be young Greg Weld, Kansas City, who bested a similar field here last Saturday driving the Les Butler Chevy out of Dallas. Weld and Butler have gone through the car completely during the past week and assured fair speedway officials it'll be a top contender.

Then there's Harold Leep, Wichita and his fellow townsman, Dale Reed, both of whom are noted chargers in their Chevy-engined cars and proved it last week by winning time trials and placing second, respectively, in last week's feature.

Jerry (Scratch) Daniels, St. Paul, Minn., and Indy "500" Red Amick, Muncie, Ind., who were sidelined as a result of a spectacular crash last weekend here, also will be on hand.

Drivers from both the Eastern and Western Seaboards have been attracted here by the $6,000 in prize money. Entries have been received from Californians Don Brown of San Fernando, Bob Coulter of Long Beach, Jerry Jones of Etiwanda and Walt Wyrembek of Los Angeles and Buzz Barton of Tampa, Fla.

Other central states entries include Curly Boyd of Indianapolis, Jerry Blundy of Galesburg, Ill., Dean Mast of Dover, Ohio, Jim McCune of Toledo and Paul Dorcic of Chicago.

On tap at 2:30 p.m. following the qualifying trials is the first of five 10-mile heat races which will determine the 20 starters in the 50-mile, 50-lap Missouri Futurity which climaxes 1964 auto racing at the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

Nichols Gets Third Round Tourney Lead

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP)—PGA champion Bobby Nichols outshot Arnold Palmer in a head-to-head birdie duel Saturday with a blistering 66 and took a two-stroke lead through the third round of the $200,000 Carling World Golf Championship.

While rookie George Archer, leader through the first two days, collapsed in a wave of bogeys, Nichols zoomed into the lead for the $35,000 first prize with a 54-hole score of 206. Palmer was at 208.

They were the only players still under par after three days of wrestling with the Oakland Hills course, a 6,907-yard monster with a par 70.

The field of 78 survivors of the original cast of 156 goes into the final 18 holes Sunday.

Closest to the two leaders was Dick Sikes of Springdale, Ark., a pro of less than six months, who fired a 70 in the threesome with Nichols and Palmer for 210.

Gary Player of South Africa was another shot back at 211, firing a brilliant 67 despite unsettling news that his 3-year-old son Mark, was seriously ill in Nassau.

Peter Butler, the Englishman who starred in soccer and cricket before taking up golf, had a chance to match Player-hole for a 212, where he was tied with Don January, who shot a 68.

Four players were knotted at 213. They were Bill Casper, who shot a 69 but was penalized two strokes for a 71 because his caddy inadvertently raked over his own footprints in a trap on the second hole; Terry Dill, of Muleshoe, Tex., 68; British Open champion Tony Lema, 70, and Pete Brown of Los Angeles, one of the Negro players, who rallied with a fine 69.

Archer, who unleashed a record 65 on the first day and held his lead with a 74 Friday, took four 5s on the first five holes and staggered in with a 76 for 215.

He was tied at this figure with leading money winner Jack Nicklaus and a half-dozen others. The powerful Nicklaus finally found his game after two mediocre rounds and shot a 70.

Thrilling Duel In Racing

Gordon Wooley Injured In Car Pile-Up

The Tri-State Midget Auto Racing Championship was won, Saturday night, at the Missouri State Fair by Danny Frye, of Kansas City in a thrilling duel with Bud Hoppe of St. Louis.

Frye and Hoppe went into a first lap duel and kept it going through the 20-lap feature event on the half-mile oval. The yellow flag stopped the race for after three laps, causing a restart for the remaining 17-laps. after Gordon Wooley, Waco, Tex., and Bill Burdick, Kansas City, collided on the south turn.

Burdick struck the outside fence, going out of the first turn and came back down on to the track where Wooley's car crashed into it and flipped. Wooley's car flipped down the track and overturned upside down pinning Wooley in it until men rushed from the infield and turned it back on its wheels. Wooley was taken to the Bothwell Hospital where he was X-rayed for a possible fracture of the breast bone.

After the re-start the two leaders resumed their battle for first place again, Frye leading the pack across the finish line.

Kansas Citian Sets New Mark In Trapshoot

VANDALIA, Ohio (AP)—C. E. Barnhart, 40-year-old interior decorator from Kansas City, set a new world record of 978 of 1,000 in taking the men's overall championship of the 65th Grand American Trapshoot, which ended Saturday.

Barnhart failed to win an individual crown.

In the women's division, Judith Allison of Elgin, Ill., and Gladys Pfost of Phillipsburg, Kan., won the doubles event.

An erie silence fell over the mile-long firing lines as the trapshoot ended.

As the echo of nearly 2 million shotgun shells faded away, a cute housewife-business woman from Miami, Fla., stood out as the No. 1 star and queen of the country's Annie Oakleys.

She is "Punkin" (few know her real first name) Flock, who spans only 5 feet 1 and weighs 117. But she runs a road-building equipment export business as a sideline to handle her home.

Firing against the best feminine stars in North America, she won the all-around championship with 370 of 400 based on 200 targets at 16 yards, 100 handicaps and 100 doubles.

She also took the over-all title with 933 of 1,000, which included 600 at 16 yards, 300 at handicaps and 100 doubles. She was captain of the "Sports Afield" All American team and proved her right to the title this week although she did not win an individual event.

She tied for three titles, but lost all in shoot-offs.

Here's the Scoop on "Soviet-Made" Scooper

World News In Brief

BERLIN (AP) — A 19-year-old East German youth died today in a hail of bullets from East German border guards as he tried to flee to West Berlin. A companion, 23, reached the West.

West Berlin police said the two young men started to crawl through barbed wire on the East German side of the Teltow Canal about 2 A.M. but they were spotted by the guards.

The older escapee forced his way through the wire, and although badly cut made it across to the other side. Police fished the exhausted man out of the water.

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Gen. Ne Win's military government has arrested six persons in Mandalay after Buddhist unrest in that ancient city.

Sources said the action Friday stemmed from last week's burning of a newspaper by militant Buddhists reportedly provoked by insulting remarks to the Young Buddhists Association. The government has warned Buddhist clergy that it will take firm steps against hostile actions by monks.

The six, three of whom are newsmen, will be brought before a committee seeking to determine reasons for the unrest.

TOKYO (AP) — Communist North Korea announced today it had staged a welcoming ceremony for a South Korean soldier who allegedly defected.

A broadcast by the official North Korean radio identified him as Li Eun Jong, and said he had been given a sum of money as a reward for defecting.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Norwegian archeologist says a tiny spinning wheel dicovered in Newfoundland is proof that Norse explorer Leif Ericson discovered America five centuries before Columbus.

Sonic Boom Warning

PERU, Ind., (AP)—Residents along a corridor from Poplar Bluff, Mo., to Richmond, Ky., were warned Saturday of possible sonic booms from two jet bomber flights Tuesday.

The 15-minute flights at twice the speed of sound will start at 9:15 a. m. and 10:15 a. m. CST, Bunker Hill Air Force Base spokesmen said.

No Beauties Here?

GAINESVILLE, Mo. (AP)—The Sweetheart of the Ozarks beauty contest, set for Sept. 12, has been cancelled.

Not enough prospective sweethearts showed interest.

Has Varied Uses

Gutta-percha is the name applied to the evaporated milky fluid, or latex, furnished by several trees in the Malay archipelago. It has varied uses, such as golf ball covers, electrical insulation and chewing gum.

People In The News

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Baseball club owner Charles Finley, wearing a Beatle wig he said cost $35, arrived by plane Friday with 40,000 tickets which he hopes to sell for the Beatles concert he is sponsoring Sept. 17.

About 10,000 mail orders already are in. Finley said he is paying the beatles $150,000 for their performance.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mrs. Philip Graham, publisher of the Washington Post and Newsweek Magazine, is the weekend guest of President and Mrs. Johnson at their Texas ranch as the result of a spur-of-the-moment invitation by the President.

Mrs. Graham was among well-wishers at Atlantic City airport as the presidential party prepared to leave by Air Force jet.

The President, while shaking hands with Mrs. Graham, invited her to come along.

"Okay," she said, "I'll get my bag."

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. said Friday he'd never said "A-OK" when he made America's first suborbital flight on May 5, 1961.

Shepard, vacationing in Wilmington, Del., with relatives, said it was the public rleations man who picked up the term from the chatter of control stations. Shepard, however, doesn't mind the attribution.

FURRY QUARTET — Baby bears may come in pairs but rarely in fours. These cubs were born recently to a Yellowstone National Park bear. In this sequence, mom wanted to cross the river (top) to mooch food from tourists. But the cubs refused to follow. After three attempts, mom wearily gave up and climbed the mountain, with her little bears behind (right). Park rangers have no record of a quadruple bear birth.

Students Express Views On Current World Issues

Five students who will return to high school this year, were asked for their views on current world issues. Here's what they had to say:

Bruce Kueck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Kueck, 904 South Quincy, at 14 has his goals set and knows exactly what he is going to do in life. He is entering St. Paul's College at Concordia as a high school freshman because he plans to be a Lutheran pastor of the Missouri Synod. He attended St. Paul's Lutheran school here.

Bruce thinks a Junior College for Sedalia would be good for students interested in advanced education. Something like that also is needed, he said, to help Sedalia prosper to a larger city.

He is interested in the presidential election and though he cannot vote for a long time he likes to pick candidates on the basis of what they have done and what they plan to do for the good of the country. If he could vote, Bruce said, he would vote for Johnson.

When it came to the race for governor he had not kept up too closely, he said. Although he had watched the outcome of the primary election he had not paid a great deal of attention to the issues.

Viet Nam, Bruce feels, needs the will to win. He is disturbed about the world situation because he feels there would be war. He does not, however, believe that tension and brink of war situations will last long enough for him to be called for military service, because he thinks that a conference that will assure peace could be arranged.

Lonita Martin, 16, is the daughter of Mrs. Etta R. Spoor, 602 South Moniteau, and is a senior at Smith-Cotton High School.

"I think a junior college for Sedalia would be a wonderful idea," said Lonita, "I know personally a lot of people who want a junior college because they could get that much toward their education locally and then could go elsewhere later on. If there was a junior college here by the time I graduated I would definitely go to one here." She plans to attend CMSC.

When questioned if she was interested in the presidential election she said: "Definitely. I am just waiting for the day I can vote. It is a great opportunity Americans have to vote, and I can't understand why grownups don't want to."

If she had a vote this year she would vote for Johnson, Lonita said, because she likes the actions he has taken so far, especially in foreign policies. "Johnson's personality appeals to me, too." And she added that she didn't go along with Goldwater and his extreme conservative ideas.

For governor she would vote for Hearnes. In the primary she didn't particularly like Bush she said, because she likes somebody who takes a stand on things — Hearnes did, and she likes his political issues.

"Of course I am concerned about the world situation. What wide awake American wouldn't be concerned? According to what I have studied and read Viet Nam is supposed to be the key to the Middle East. If that is true we should do something about it. None of the countries want all-out war, but they all want to see how much they can gain without war."

Lonita feels that because of this things aren't going to change much and the world will still be tense by the time she would be old enough for military service.

She wants to be an English teacher at high school level, and plans to take English as a major and psychology as a minor, for the latter would help in teaching, she said. She thinks, too, that perhaps after a few years of teaching she might consider going into the Peace Corps.

Bob Berlin, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Berlin, 516 East Fourth. He will be a senior this year in Sacred Heart High School.

A Junior College for Sedalia would be nice, Bob thinks, because it would keep a lot of the teenagers in the town.

He has not quite made up his mind on the presidentia! candidates yet, wanting to let them do more campaigning to see where they stand. He believes right now that, if he could vote, he would vote for Goldwater. He believes that a change would be good for the government. For the same reason he would vote, in the race for governor, for Shepley.

"This country was founded on a two party system" said Bob, "and I don't like one party domination."

The situation in Viet Nam disturbs everybody, Bob said, and he thinks the same conditions will exist by the time he goes into military service.

Bob's plans are to attend college when he is through high school and take a general course the first two years to prepare for whatever he decides to take up later.

Walter Bell, 17, son of Mrs. Ella G. Bell, 304 West Cooper, is a senior in Hubbard High School.

"A Junior College" said Walter, "that would be good. Then those who couldn't afford to go away to college could attend. A junior college education is far better than just having a high school education."

Evidently he hadn't heard of the possibility of having a junior college in Sedalia for he seemed surprised at the question. But his plans for the future include attending a junior college. When he graduates from high school next spring he expects to go to Vallejo, Calif., to attend the junior college there, after which he is going to take over his uncle's service station there. His uncle plans to retire and give the business to Walter, but wants him to attend junior college first. For the past three summers Walter has gone to Vallejo and worked for his uncle. "Opportunities are better there, too," he said.

"If I could vote" Walter said, "I would cast my vote for Lyndon Johnson. Johnson has been trying to keep the country out of war and has cut taxes. He seems to have the interest of all Americans at heart."

He would vote for Warren Hearnes for governor, he remarked because he felt the Democratic candidate would do more for the people of the state.

The United States, Walter thought, was justified in defending Viet Nam. If it doesn't take action trouble will keep on spreading to other countries until the whole world is involved.

Mackie Silverman, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Silverman, 1105 New England, and is a senior at Smith-Cotton High School.

A Junior College here would be good for a number of reasons, Mackie thinks. The main reason, however, is that it would give a lot of children an opportunity to go to college who couldn't otherwise go. All the expenses they would have here would be their tuition. Some have jobs and could work while continuing their education. Also, she pointed out, it will being in students from other places in the Sedalia area. It would mean more younger peoople and that is good for a town and good for business.

"I watched the whole Republican convention" said Mackie, "and I was thoroughly disgusthand and the Democrat convened. It was all set beforehand and the Democrat convention will be the same way." She thinks there is a lot of money wasted on those conventions when they know beforehand what they are going to do.

"I don't care for Goldwater" she said. "If I could vote I would vote for Johnson — at least he is better than Goldwater."

When it came to the governor's race she just didn't know. "I'm not very well informed on the candidates for governor."

The trouble in Viet Nam bothers her a lot, said Mackie. She feels that they should really get in there and do something. "The whole foreign policy scares me," she said. "We say we want our allies to be independent and then when they become too independent we get upset."

She felt that the stand of the late President Kennedy on the Bay of Pigs was good, it made Russia back down, but then this country didn't follow through. Other nations would feel more secure if the United States would stand firm.

Mackie plans to go on to college and then graduate school. She wants to enter social service in the field of adoption.

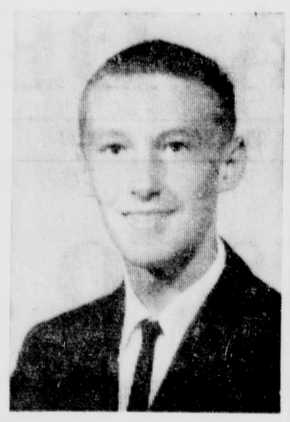

"I'd like to work a couple of years" said Mackie, "then get married and have four children."

Her main goal, however, is just to be happy. You have to find out what makes you happy, she explained, but whether it's satisfaction in your job, a good marriage, or whatever it is, you have to work for those things. As long as you are trying to do the best you can and live as near right as you can, it is bound to rub off on those around you.

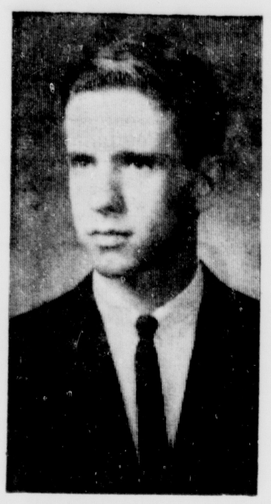

Mackie has another goal, too. She writes poetry and some day she hopes to have some published.

Boys Adding Apparel Ideas For Classes

Grade school boys and their mothers are doing apparel arithmetic as back to school time approaches.

Turtlenecks under shirts, shirts under sweaters, sweaters under jackets add up to a layer-on-layer look that's warm, comfortable, versatile. The component parts multiply wardrobes.

The "pro look" of sports fashions adapted for all-around wear gives boys still another choice. Already winning acceptance is the ski look of quilted jackets.

"Matador" pants or knickers are a new entry, and whether apparel manufacturers will be able to get boys back into knickers is a question only the boys and their mothers can answer.

Teenage Fat Girls Naturally That Way

CHICAGO (AP) — Science has a not-too-assuring word for anxious mothers of fat daughters.

A study announced Thursday showed that of 180 teen-age fat girls, 175 of them were just naturally built that way.

And furthermore, their builds were largely inherited from their parents.

Technically, Doctors Carl C. Seltzer and Jean Mayer of Harvard University described the 175 fat girls' build as endomorphic, having "roly-poly physique with the abdomen larger than the chest and relatively small hands and feet."

The endomorph, they said, has a natural tendency to put on fat.

Results of the study were reported in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Alert All To Safety In Traffic

The much discussed "population explosion" plus national "affluence" combine to prompt school and police authorities to re-emphasize the responsibility of motorists for the safety of all the children in traffic as a new school term approaches.

The "population explosion" has carried school enrollments to astronomical heights at all levels of education. This means that more youngsters than ever before will be on the streets and highways.

The national affluence has vastly increased car ownership, bringing many new and comparatively inexperienced drivers into the scene.

No small portion of these new drivers are "school children" in their own right — teenagers who have acquired licenses to drive one of the family cars, and many who have acquired cars of their own.

More New Schools

Not only will there be more school children in the streets and more cars in traffic; many children and many motorists will be traversing comparatively unfamiliar routes to newly constructed school buildings. This in itself adds complexity to the problem of traffic safety for school children.

Special "School's Open—Drive Carefully" signs will, of course, amplify the permanently erected "School Zone" signs which frequently proclaim lowered speed limits and other safety measures as a matter of law.

Special "Crossing Guards" will be stationed at strategic intersections to supplement police department school traffic assignments. School safety patrols, made up of white belted youngsters from among the ranks of the school children themselves, will be at work on the safe side of the curb in greater numbers than ever.

Instruction in traffic safety, especially for the very young, will continue to be an important part of their classroom work. So will high school classes in safe driving for teen-agers.

Motorist's Cooperation

Nevertheless, without cooperation of the individual motorist, the full measure of traffic safety cannot be assured the children, say the authorities.

No matter how carefully guarded, the sheer thoughtless impetuosity of little children all too frequently creates the emergency that must be met by the car driver.

TO CMSC—Tom Gibbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Gibbs, 1411 South Carr, will attend Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg, this fall.

TO MARSHALL — Donald Eugene Sims, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Sims, Otterville, will attend classes in September at Missouri Valley College, Marshall, where he plans to major in music education. Sims was graduated from Pilot Grove High School, Pilot Grove.

TO BUSINESS COLLEGE—Miss Cecilia Ravenscraft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ravenscraft, 919 South Ohio, will attend classes at Central Business College, Sedalia, to study secretarial work. Miss Ravenecraft is a 1964 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School.

MU STUDENT — Randy Stone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Stone, a graduate of LaMonte High School with the class of '64 will attend the University of Missouri in Columbia and will major in engineering.

MATHEMATICS MAJOR—Raymond W. Mueller, son of Rev. and Mrs. Ernst H. R. Mueller, Lincoln, will enter Concordia Teachers' College in Seward, Neb., where he plans to major in mathematics. Mueller is a 1964 graduate of the Lincoln R-2 School.

Fighting Fish

Specially bred male Siamese fighting fish often fight continuously, with only brief respites in order to breathe, for as long as three hours. They have been known to keep up for as long as six hours before one of the adversaries finally refused to carry on.

The Pilgrims probably were the first to barbecue when they split-roasted turkey over an open fire.

TO SWBC—Miss Julie Vaughan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walker Vaughan, 1200 South Osage, will attend Southwest Baptist College, Bolivar, this fall. Miss Vaughan is a 1964 graduate of Smith-Cotton and will major in elementary education.

TO ARIZONA — Charles Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Rice, 316 East Morgan, will attend the Arizona State University, where he plans to major in business administration. Rice was graduated from the C. C. Hubbard Division of Smith-Cotton in 1964.

YOUR EYES AND VISUAL FUNCTIONS

Now, at the beginning of the school year, every parent of young children should give thought to whether or not the child's eyes and vision are prepared to do the work assigned for the year's study.

Carefully conducted school surveys under the direction of competent examiners invariably disclose that a large part of the students in each grade are unprepared visually to do the work they are trying to do. The child who is visually handicapped does not have a fair chance. How is one to know what the child's vision is really like? The Missouri Optometric Association offers the following for the parent's consideration.

Screening tests conducted under the best of conditions are, after all, only screening tests. Only the children who are obviously handicapped with poor vision acuity or who are easily detected as visually handicapped are referred for professional examination. In other words, many children who really pass the school screen tests are not able to do their work efficiently and well.

It is thought that every child who is not working up to his normal capacity in his school work should have a careful analysis made of his vision. Especially should this be done for every child who is in the lower third of his grade in achievement.

Lastly, it should be remembered that intelligence and learning are intimately dependent on good and efficient vision. It is, then, good practice to have a careful examination made of the student's eyes and visual functions once each year — and every year — while he or she is in school.

How to Light For Easier Studying, Aid to Learning

Education experts have stated that a well-lighted home study area is an important part of an environment that promotes and encourages learning.

While you can't be expected to do the job of a professional lighting engineer, some knowledge of basic principles—especially as they apply to learning situations — can produce some real improvements for students in your family.

Proper lighting should provide a relatively even distribution of light throughout the room. The lighting expert guards against extremes of brightness within a person's field of view.

Here are additional suggestions to help the student:

The desk should be placed facing a light-colored wall which reflects and contributes to a comfortable seeing environment. If necessary, cover wall with tack or pegboard.

The surface of the desk should be light colored. Glass or polished wood surfaces may reflect glare into the eyes. A tinted desk blotter helps.

Avoid shades that have dark linings or are closed at the top. This limits the distribution of light and is distracting and uncomfortable. Translucent shields that eliminate direct glare and diffuse the light are recommended.

Let there be plenty of light for the student

Child's Vision Important In Entire Future

"Your child is going blind."

This note from an eight year old boy's teacher to his parents was a stunning revelation.

The mother, who had ignored previous notes from the teacher advising that her son was having vision difficulties, immediately scheduled a vision examination for the boy. Fortunately, a thorough optometric examination revealed loss in the child's vision that could be corrected.

Few such drastic attention-getting measures may occur, but the incident points up that children's vision is a much neglected area by parents and others in close association with children.

"A child's entire future depends on the well being of his vision," states the Missouri Optometric Association. "Yet, four out of every 10 grade school children in the United States today are visually handicapped for adequate school achievement."

To learn of a child's possible vison difficulties, parents often rely entirely on school screening tests, which, in most cases, test vision at 20 feet and beyond and do not reveal many other existing and potential vision problems.

Dr. Howard R. Fields, president of the Missouri Optometric Association, advises parents to have a child's vision thoroughly examined before he enters the school and to schedule annual visual check-ups along with physical and dental examinations.

Takes Flying Lessons At Ederly Age

Her husband, 85, is amused Her son is proud. Her granddaughter, aged 4, is so impressed she prattles of being a parachutist some day.

Mrs. Hobday, a native New Zealander, is taking flying lessons and her instructors say her sureness at the controls is remarkable.

"That will be the greatest day of my life," Mrs. Hobday said.

Will she get a license?

That may be doubtful at her age. But she said: "I pass a test every year to drive my car. And I don't really need these glasses. I take 'em off in the cockpit."

Her husband, Richard, a retired clergyman, has been tolerant of his wife's flying.

"He was rather amused," she said. "He just smiled a little broadly, I suppose."

Mrs. Hobday traces her yearning to an encounter with a pioneer British aviator.

She recalled: "My ambition to fly began when Sir Charles Kingsford Smith flew the Tasman in 1928 and landed at Wigram Aerodrome, Christchurch, in New Zealand. In the early 30s he came again and I had a flight with him in the Southern Cross. I entered a competition for free flying tuition. There were 2,000 in it and I finished among the 10 finalists."

Since Mrs. Hobday was helping her husband in his ministerial duties as well as raising a family, the flying instructions never materialized.

Later the Hobdays returned to England. During World War II Mrs. Hobday qualified as an ambulance driver and at the age of 60 she whisked around blitzed London.

Her unfulfilled desire to fly was aroused again by her son, Stephen, when he joined the Three Counties Aero Club to obtain his private pilot's license.

"When I am in the air, I feel free," she said. "The whole world is around me."

Mrs. Hobday needs 20 hours dual control and 20 hours solo to qualify for a license.

Miller Criticizes Demo Convention

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — The Democrats "can not be expected to run the country well when they obviously can not even run a Democratic convention," the Republican candidate for vice president said today.

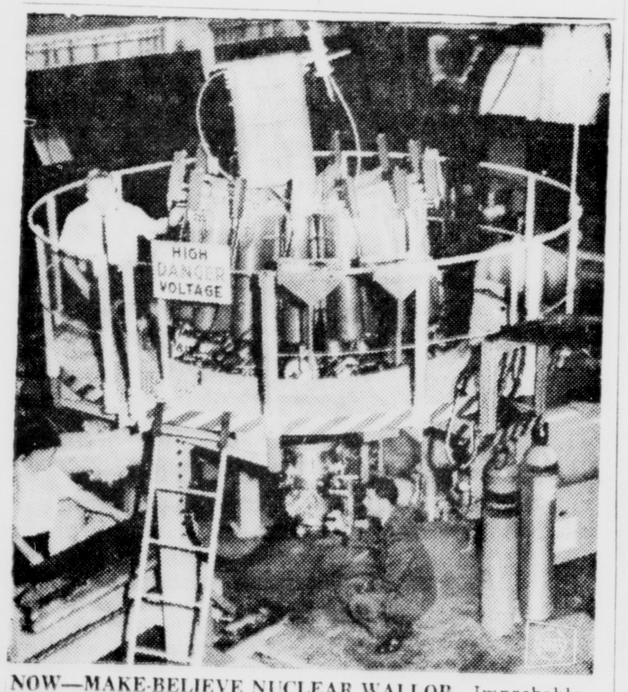

Rep. William E. Miller commented in summing up his views of the opposition party's convention, which ended Thursday night.

"They weren't even able to remove from the hall people who had no right to be there," Miller said.

He held a news conference while standing atop a baggage cart at Olean Airport, after flying in to begin a 13-hour campaign swing.

Ozark Veterinarian Works From His Log Cabin Office

By JERRY CURRY
Associated Press Writer

OCIE, Mo. (AP) —Frank (Doc) Hodges, 79, is a self-taught Ozark veterinarian who works out of a windowless log cabin office, makes calls on a horse—and charges 1916 prices.

Until two years ago, he also pitched and played first base for the local baseball team. He still keeps several gloves oiled and a baseball handy in case the sport returns to this tiny town on Bull Shoals Lake across the border from Arkansas.

"I'm still ready to play a little ball again," he says. "All I need is a chance. There still may be a few hits in me yet."

But his main love is doctoring sick animals.

"I've never treated a man," he says, "but a horse-and-cow doctor needs to know more than a man doctor. A man can tell you what's ailing him. All an old cow can do is say 'moo.'"

On the wall of his cluttered, ramshackle office is a yellowed certificate of practice from a London, Ont., veterinary school, dated Sept. 16, 1916. He earned it through a correspondence course.

"I still charge the same prices that I did 48 years ago," he says. "For a long time I was the only vet around these parts, but now we have three or four in the area. Still, my overhead hasn't increased much so I don't see any reason to up the prices."

Doc Hodges came to this mountain area in the spring of 1904, 20 years after his birth in Marshall, Ark.

"My family and I drove 300 head of cattle from Arkansas," he remembers. "We drove them on foot. We stopped around here because the blue grass on the mountain side was belly high to a big horse. It was some of the best grazing I've ever seen."

Times have changed in the Ozarks, but sick animals are still around the hills. Cedar trees dot most of the land where the blue grass once grew, and Doc Hodges lives with his wife, Clara on 160 acres. Their stock has dwindled to six horses, some dogs, cats, hogs and goats.

Neighbors often drive by the office to pick up Hodges or tell him where he's needed in the hills because Doc never got a telephone.

"I didn't think I needed a phone," he says. "I signed the petition for telephone service so other folks around here could get one. No one has ever bothered me about it again."

Hodges rides one of his horses to make some hill country calls. When he's gone, he writes a note on the blackboard hanging by his office door listing his destination. Those who need him meantime also can leave notes on the board for him.

The Hodges' have reared seven children in this rugged mountain country. Three remain in the area but the others have moved away.

He and Clara Hodges have a little garden where they grow their own tobacco and twist it up to cure before it's smoked. They also make their own soap and live generally rustic lives.

His nearby office is straight out of Snuffy Smith, the comic mountain character. Its inside looks more like a hillbilly museum than a veterinarian's office — although animal skulls, harnesses, charts and medical books abound.

An old pot-bellied stove sits in the middle of the office, and a desk-like counter is immediately to the right of the doors. On the back wall hangs a rack of frontier rifles and long-bladed knives. One of the rifles is an old flint lock with the words, "Davy Crockett," embossed on the stock.

"I'm not sure it's Davy's," grins Hodges. "I didn't get it from him, but the name was on the rifle when I got it."

Hodges has a bizarre collection of pipes. One is made of red mountain clay. Another was carved from a cedar tree root, and still another looks more like a bowl with a short spigot.

"I like the pipes and the tobacco we grow," says Hodges. "But it takes a real man to smoke my tobacco."

He filled a pipe, walked through the cabin door and sat on an old wagon seat outside. With a sigh, old Doc Hodges watched the sun go down behind the Ozark hills.

Way Out of the Doldrums--- Just List Undone Things

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Do you ever get a "This is where I came in" feeling about life?

At such times existence seems to have a dull, boring, repetitive quality. Everything appears stale and old.

One way to shake yourself out of these mental doldrums is to sit down and make a list of the things you haven't done.It is surprising — even exciting — how many possiblities emerge to make life more interesting, or perhaps perilous.

For example, after more than half a century spent on this spinning planet, I find that I have never—

Kissed a movie star.

Inherited any money.

Bitten a dog.

Written a letter to my congressman.

Smooched at a drive-in movie.

Learned to drive a car, play a three-speed phonograph, dance the polks or play a harmonica.

Dedicated a bridge, launched a battleship, or fallen off a horse.

Slept on a park bench.

Lain down on a psychiatrist's couch.

Ridden a balloon, a rodeo steer, or — for very long —the water wagon.

Competed in a hog calling contest.

'Fashion Plus Function' Is Coed Motto

"Fashion with function" is the motto of back-to-college girls. It's intended for a look of completeness, and a look planned to provide many looks, through the skillful switching of wardrobe basics.

The sloppy look has long disappeared from the campus picture, and the well-groomed, smoothly put-together look is in, points out Wilbur Daniels, executive secretary of the National Board of the Coat and Suit Industry.

A solid-tone suit with plaid top coat, a suit with matching long coat, a sleeveless shell top with skirt and jacket or any variety of suits combined with coats, skirts with jackets and tops provide the college girl with the essentials for neat, attractive grooming, in class, around campus.

Add Dresses

Add to these a few simple, fashionable dresses — some cotton-blend shirtwaists for the warm days of early fall, some easy A-line and shift shapes. Many of the latter are versatile in styling — ready to go to class by day with the accompaniment of shirts or sweaters, effective for informal evenings on their own.

Balmacaans, chesterfields, trench coats and reefers are among the up-dated fall coat classics. Shoulders are soft and often raglan; buttons perk up and soften the line.

Fur collars, often seen, are generally detachable, so that both the coat and the collar can do double duty.

Pleats Flutter

Pleats on skirts flutter appealingly, and are used in many different interpretations. Conversely, other skirts are slim and easy.

Fabrics highlight subdues surfaces, in keeping with the softer, more subtle look. Tweeds are vari-colored — mixtures, diagonals, monotones. Coverts and cavalry twills look new, and checks and plaids, always back to campus favorites, are very much in the picture.

BIG CAPER — The topless look isn't the only Paris fashion frivolity for fall. One designer has created the "cover up" look. This cape is a giant-sized purple and black houndstooth wool, styled in a circular line and draped over the head.

To Transform George's Old English Home

By PATRICK J. MASSEY

This humdrum community of 19,000 is due for transformation into a bright, modern town with three to four times its present population.

The area has changed little with the centuries. Set in the northeast countryside, just off the Great North Road highway, Washington acquired three coal mines and a chemical factory following the Industrial Revolution but rested secure amid 5,000 acres of agricultural land that government rules have long marked as taboo for building developments.

Now, this all will change. The area is scheduled for rezoning as a "new town," as the English development areas are called. Plans call for an influx of new industries and a rash of housing projects that will quickly chew up the fields and meadows.

In all, some 20,000 new homes are planned.

The whole project will take about 10 years. When it's done, Washington should be one of the most modern communities in England.

The showpiece of the town is still the Old Hall which embodies the remains of the ancient manor house of one branch of the Washington family. The last Washington to own it died in the 15th century but it continued in possession of his heirs, the Tempests and Mallorys.

The yellowish, sandstone Old Hall was condemned in 1934 as unfit for human habitation. A local committee was formed to save the hall and succeeded in buying it.

After extensive renovations, the building was established as a museum and showplace, a shrine visited by American tourists year after year.

Formally called the Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit, the mass held in Catholic churches to mark opening of the court year, takes its more usual name of "Red Mass" from the color of the priests' vestments, symbolizing tongues of fire representing the Holy Spirit.

Honeymoon's Origin

The word "honeymoon" originated from an ancient custom among northern nations of Europe. It was the custom of newly married couples to drink wine made from honey for 30 days, or a moon, after their marriage.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, Aug. 30, the 243rd day of 1964. There are 123 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1813, Creek Indians attacked a stockaded refuge, Fort Mims, near the present site of Mobile, Ala. Troops sent there to protect civilians were taken by surprise; only 50 persons survived of the 553 in the stockade.

On this date

In 1862, the Second Battle of Bull Run was fought.

In 1924, the Dawes Plan for World War I preparations was signed in London. The plan followed suggestions by U.S. Ambassador Charles G. Dawes.

In 1944, a French provisional government headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle was set up in Paris.

In 1945, American sailors and Marines landed at Yokosuka naval base which the Japanese surrendered three hours later.

Ten years ago — The court martial of Lt. Col. Harry Fleming, accused of collaborating with the Communists while a prisoner in North Korea, opened at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Five years ago — President Dwight D. Eisenhower started a two-day conference with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan at the prime minister's country home, Chequers.

One year ago—James M. Landis, former Securities and Exchange Commission chairman and presidential adviser, was sentenced in New York to 30 days in jail on income tax charges.

Bing's Markets, Holiday Inn Purchase at Fair

Top market live weight prices were paid by Vernon M. Bingaman for eight lambs at the Missouri State Fair. Bingaman, M. L. Brown and Gene Landon, the latter manager, and all part owners of Holiday Inn, bought one choice lamb and all primal pork cuts at the exposition.

Eight of the lambs, grading choice to prime, in their own classifications, will be sold at meat counters of Bing's No. 1 store, 1100 South Limit and Bing's No. 2, Broadway and Emmett.

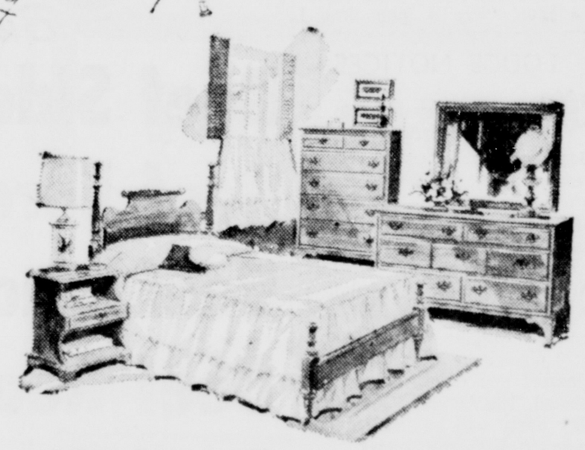

Total live weight of the lambs was 774 pounds. Dressed weight of 419 pounds was 54.95 percentage of the live weight. The lambs, displayed in full carcass this week at the fair, were all ribbon winners. They were exhibited by FFA and 4-H members and individuals. Four were in the lighter class; four in the heavier.

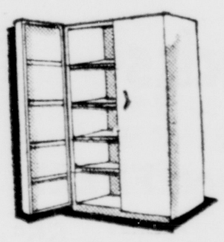

Holiday Inn purchased primal pork cuts, which included hams, loins, and shoulders. The pork and cuts from one choice lamb will be included on the inn's menu.

Ugh.

It's just not us.

We don't go in much for trading bees or sales jamborees or assorted powwows.

Maybe it's because we don't quite understand the system.

If there are cars left over every year, why make so many in the first place?

And how come the price goes down, even though the cars are still brand new?

How does the poor guy who bought one last week feel about this week's prices?

How can a dealer keep enough parts on hand when they all keep changing?

It's all very confusing.

Either we're way behind the times. Or way ahead.

'Ben Casey' Restored To Monday Slot

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Only three years ago, a dark-haired, husky young actor named Vincent Edwards was an unknown.

For 10 years he had earned an uncertain living playing villains in movies that fill the third spot on a triple-feature.

But then Vincent Edwards became the star of the television series "Ben Casey," with a reputation for a mercurial temper, a rather resentful attitude toward those who interfered with his private life and a particularly sharp tongue.

Time, security and success seem to have mellowed Vince Edwards. As he moves into his fourth season playing the dedicated young neurosurgeon, Edwards' attitude is friendly rather than hostile; he smiles where he used to glower; he rarely exhibits symptoms of acute boredom during preseason interviews, an annual television rite.

Edwards, of course, has plenty to smile about. In three short years he has shot from obscurity to stardom, with commensurate adjustments in his bank balance. Recently he went into partnership with Carol Burnett — they have the same business manager — in a $2-million real estate deal.

He now heads a production company preparing to make television shows, even motion pictures. He is in demand for motion picture parts, has a successful night club act and has made some best-selling records.

Edwards grins with something like embarrassment when it is suggested that his attitudes have changed.

"Well, it took me awhile to get accustomed to it," he said. "Now I know the things that go with the job."

It could be, of course, that events of last season also helped turn him into a more outgoing soul. ABC, for reasons known only to its programming experts, decided to take its most popular program, "Ben Casey," which dominated ratings on Monday nights, and reschedule it opposite CBS "Beverly Hillbillies." The idea, of course, was to assault the corn-cob comedy with scalpel and stethoscope.

The gambit failed. "Ben Casey" developed a case of low-ratings fever that made it sicker than most of Ben's patients.

"I told them I didn't think it was a good idea," said Edwards. "But who listens?"

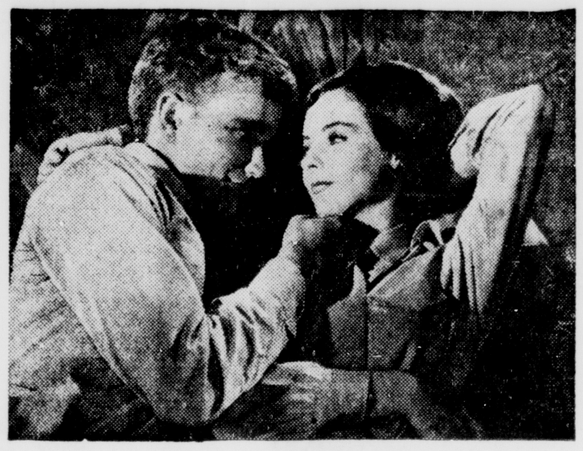

At any rate, "Ben Casey" has been restored to its old Monday night spot.

"There will be a romance with Stella Stevens in five shows," Edwards said, "and others with good-looking actresses like Janice Rule. You might say Casey will be a little less dedicated to surgery and more to girls."

Edwards, for all his new, urbane — even jolly — facade, remains the same fellow at heart. He guards his private life, including his address, as if it were a secret formula. A bachelor, he is rarely seen in the usual night spots around town and, when possible spends his weekends far from Hollywood.

Disneyland visit is highlight of Tony Curtis new romantic comedy, "40 Pounds of Trouble," and shown here resting between visits to various attractions are child newcomer Claire Wilcox and Suzanne Pleshette, who share leads with Tony, along with Phil Silvers. The film is a Curtis Enterprise production in color and Panavision which Universal is releasing. Starts tonite at the 50 Drive In Theatre.

On discovering Army nurse Millie Perkins on a tropical isle—the first female he has seen in months—Robert Walker proceeds immediately to romance her. Scene is from Warner Bros.' new comedy-drama, "Ensign Pulver", which opens today at the Fox Theatre. The Technicolor-Panavision release, produced and directed by Joshua Logan as a sequel to "Mr. Roberts", stars Walker and Miss Perkins along with Burl Ives, Walter Matthau, Kay Medford and Tommy Sands.

Beatles Craze Touches a Writer

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Some people will tell you that the Beatles are Britain's revenge for the War of 1812. I don't buy that.

They're okay in my book.

Up until this week, I was just another Hollywood writer. True, I was a confidante of Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Frank Sinatra, Elvis Presley, Eddie Fisher and others who have generated mob hysteria.

Then I met the Beatles and talked with them. More important, they touched me. Ringo Starr laid his hand on my shoulder.

Man, it made me an instant celebrity.

Ringo, with that sad, sheepdog look, did it. He's no Rock Hudson when it comes to looks but he's got something that girls crave.

My encounter with Ringo and the other Beatles took place at the airport. A mob of teen-age girls saw it.

When the Beatles got in their plane, I walked up the ramp to the lobby. I was mobbed by the girls. One screamed: "Ringo touched him."

The girl touched my arm and shrieked as if she had put her finger in an open light socket. Soon girls by the score touched me. All went through the same shrieking ritual.

One girl noticed some notes in my hand. They included Ringo's answers to questions about a reported romance with actress-singer Ann-Margret.

"You mean you recorded what Ringo said?" asked the girl pleadingly. I gave her the notes. She couldn't have been happier with a mink coat. But not for long.

About 20 girls pounced on her and tore the notes to shreds. Each girl seemed happy with a little scrap of paper.

A couple of the girls asked for my autograph. "Yeah! Yeah! Yeah!" I shrieked. I signed autographs for a minute or two and then someone yelled that the plane was taxiing to the runway.

I went home. One of the neighborhood girls had seen me on a television newsreel. She came to the house with a half-dozen of her girl friends. The same touch, the same shriek. The same questions.

Then Paul Harvey, the ABC radio newscaster, quoted a line I had used about the Beatles — that they are the only performers in the history of showbusiness who make a million dollars a year for letting the audience entertain them.

That brought phone calls — hundreds of them — all from girls whose voices put them in the 8 to 14 group.

Does Ringo really look that sad?" "Is Paul McCartney really that cute?" "Is John Lennon really married?" "Is George Harrison funny?" In a rick 'n' roll beat, I shrieked the same answer to all questions. "Yeah! Yeah! Yeah!"

Grab 'Em Young, Early TV Strategy

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A study of the television schedules for the new season indicates the networks have adopted this strategy for winning ratings: Grab 'em young and grab 'em early.

Never has so much money gone into series that begin the evening programming. The thinking appears to be that if a family starts out watching a certain network, it is likely to stick with the same channel.

The rating record appears to bear this out. One network usually dominates an entire evening. For instance, CBS has traditionally locked in Monday night, ABC is strongest on Thursday, NBC does best on Sunday.

This season will bring an unusual amount of early-evening series obviously aimed at the youthful viewer. Will adults stick with the channel the kids turn on? The networks hope so.

Thus we find ABC starting out its Monday programming with "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," about the adventures of an atomic submarine. NBC is offering "90 Bristol Court," three separate situation comedies loosely tied together.

NBC starts Tuesday with "Mr. Novak" and its built-in teen-age appeal, while ABC offers the war series, "Combat."

Thursday finds a three-way fight for the youngsters. NBC hopes "Daniel Boone" will recapture Fess Parker's "Davy Crockett" and its magical hold on young fancies. CBS is countering with a comedy about Frankenstein and other lovelies, "The Munsters." ABC is stringing along with "The Flintstones."

"International Showtime" begins Friday for NBC. CBS continues with "Rawhide," beefing up the Western with guest stars like Rita Hayworth and Dean Martin. ABC is bringing another cartoon series out of the Janna-Barbera factory, "Jonny Quest."

Saturday finds NBC in an all-out campaign for the young stay-at-homes —"Flipper," the educated dolphin; "Mr. Magoo," the near-sighted bumbler; and "Kentucky Jones," with Dennis Weaver as foster father of a Chinese boy. ABC will offer "Outer Limits" for young lovers of the far-out. CBS confidently continues with the middle-aged Jackie Gleason.

On Sunday, CBS begins early with "Mr. Ed" followed by "Lassie" followed by "My Favorite Martian," a hard-to-beat parley for young audiences. But NBC hopes the kids will want to take a palatable history lesson with "Profiles in Courage," which will precede the ever-appealing Walt Disney. ABC trails along with "Wagon Train," cut down to an hour from last season's 90 minutes.

High Schools Facing Up To Challenge

The nation's high school students will encounter new freedoms and responsibilities this fall as educators across the country take advantage of new technology and new teaching methods to equip students for the space age.

All this has been made possible by widespread use of educational television, programmed teaching, language laboratories, campus high schools and emphasis on independent study.

The techniques are credited with producing some of the best educated high school students in the nation's history and with having helped teachers to cope with spiraling high school enrollments that are expected to top 13 million this year and push close to the 16 million mark by 1970.

Only The Best

The job of handling enormous enrollments is complicated by a shortage of facilities for college-bound students and a job market that many fear will be able to absorb only the best of those who graduate.

Problems facing the students have prompted several solutions nation-wide in scope. They range from making education compulsory through age 18 and extending high school two years, to the billion dollar War-on-Poverty program that is planned to help several hundred thousand youths through job training and education in camps, centers, communities and campuses.

Within the school systems, the solutions have frequently been dramatic and are expected to have increasing impact on students this fall.

Campus High Schools

More than 10 million pupils of all ages are enrolled in courses that use educational television as either the chief teaching method or as an important aid to the instructor.

Where financing permits, campus high schools such as the 40-acre Holland High School at Holland, Mich., are being built. Students are encouraged to undertake individual study, with the teachers operating more as catalysts and guides rather than as fountains of information.

There are a growing number of model schools such as the Malcolm Price Laboratory School, which is operated as part of the State College of Iowa and is dedicated to research and experimentation to provide the best possible educational experiences.

Teachers Loaned

Some colleges and universities are lending faculty members to nearby high schools to teach selected college subjects.

Some college officials have complained that good high schools are so advanced that they provide much of the instruction that used to make up the first two years of college.

Four Scampering Feet

It all depends on your personal point of view whether you were left breathless by watching the Republican and Democratic national conventions, or whether you erupted verbally because politics usurped the television screen displacing regular and personally preferential programs.

Some viewers eyed the political activities from start to finish, others gave them intermittent attention in between dozing off in the arm chair.

All the hoopla is not over by a long shot. Wait until after President Johnson and Veep Candidate Hubert Humphrey come out from under the shade of the live oaks on the banks of the Pedernales in Texas where they hastened after the Democratic convention in Atlantic City to do some campaign planning; or for the return of GOP Presidential Candidate Barry Goldwater from his leisurely cruise among the Santa Barbara Islands off the coast of California.

Almost you don't have to wait for their return. Minor blasting is already under way.

On behalf of the Democrats President Johnson says the American people are going to win one of their finest victories in November by building a true national party of Democrats and Republicans.

Goldwater agrees there will be a fine victory in November, but it will be won by a true national party composed of Republicans and Democrats.

To make the campaign more interesting, now comes the Prohibition party's candidate, E. Harold Munn without benefit of much television attention who, in Chicago, declares he regards socialism, secularism, alcoholism, obscene literature and communism as threats to the nation's well-being. His party will encourage the country to meet these evils with a vigorous and dynamic program of constructive Christian action.

No one can find fault with that kind of a program but chances are we'll hear less about it during the campaign than what the Democrats and Republicans propose to do to save the country.

Up until now the issues have not all been outlined in wide perspective. Then, too, there may be surprising national and international developments before the people generally can make a firm decision in November. Nevertheless, on the basis of what they know now and what they don't know may happen during the next two months, many persons are presently declaring their preference —either for the Democratic nominees or for the Republican nominees. The partisans, of course can be expected to do this early.

But those who prefer to see more and hear more as the candidates explain and extol party platforms, issues and convictions, will reserve their final choice until much of the political fog clears away.

But as of now, peeking through the mist, the feet seen scampering along the ground in the lead are definitely identified as those of President Johnson and Hubert Humphrey.

From the partisan standpoint, if these men stumble it shouldn't happen to two more capable candidates.

Real Drama Behind Closed Doors

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The 1964 Democratic national convention was billed in advance as a dull affair. And on television it frequently appeared so.

But behind the scenes in Convention Hall and behind the relaxation of Democratic delegates along that seven miles of sunny boardwalk, occurred one of the most significant battles of American politics. It will cut deep into the structure of the Democratic party for years to come.

It was a battle waged partly in public, with Mississippi Freedom delegates outside the Convention Hall locking arms and singing, "This little vote of mine, I'm gonna let it shine." And it was waged partly inside the Convention Hall, with regular Alabama delegates hoping they would be thrown out.

But the most dramatic and important part of the battle was waged inside closed caucuses.

Specifically the compromise to seat two Mississippi Freedom delegates and require the regular Mississippians to take a loyalty, oath, was worked out in private huddles by Sen. Hubert Humphrey; Walter Reuther, head of the Auto Workers; David Lawrence, former Governor of Pennsylvania; Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon; and Edward Weisel, President Johnson's personal adviser.

After it was agreed upon, Humphrey and Weisl cleared it with the White House while Reuther was given the job of clearing it with Negro leaders, especially Rev. Martin Luther King and James Farmer of CORE. Weisl and Gov. Lawrence also undertook to get it approved by Southern leaders.

How Compromise Was Sold

When the compromise went before some of the bigger state delegations in close-door caucuses, there was trouble. Inside the California caucus Rep. Gus Hawkins, first Negro congressman elected from west of the Mississippi River, was vigorously opposed. But Verna Camson, Negro delegate on the Credentials Committee, approved, as did Rep. Jimmy Roosevelt, a longtime champion of Negro causes, and Sen. Pierre Salinger, former aide to John Kennedy. Jess Unruh, speaker of the California legislature, passed.

The California caucus finally approved the compromise by a 114 to 44 vote.

In the New York caucus, Joyce Austin, a member of the Credentials Committee, at first was opposed, but later accepted the compromise. Edward Dudley, President of the Manhattan Borough and Earl Brown, his deputy, both Negroes, agreed with the argument of delegate Weisel that it was possible to win the battle over Mississippi delegates, but lose the war. The loss of one or two big Southern states, such as Texas, it was pointed out, could tip the election away from Johnson to Goldwater.

Inside the Colorado delegation, some white delegates threatened the bolt if Eugene "Bull" Connor, famous Birmingham police commissioner who had called out the dogs on Negro demonstrators, was seated.

One closed-door meeting, held in the Atlantic City office of Presidential Aide Walter Jenkins, was attended by Mayor Robert Wagner of New York, Mayor Dick Daley of Chicago, Gov. John Connally of Texas, Tom Burke of Cleveland, Joe Barr, ex-Mayor of Pittsburgh, Frank Smith of Philadelphia, and Sen. Joe Clark, and ex-Gov. David Lawrence, both of Pennsylvania.

Lawrence, who presided, argued that a floor fight must be avoided at all costs. It would be too emotional, too heart-rending, would tear everyone to pieces. It was agreed that there was no legal basis for seating the Mississippi Freedom delegation, but that a floor fight must be avoided.

It was after this that the extremely important concession was made that future Democratic conventions would bar states which denied voting rights to minorities.

"More Time" Plea For South

Another important meeting was called by Gov. Connally at which eloquent pleas were made by four Southern Governors to give the South more time.

"Give us a little more running room," pleaded Connally. "We have a lot of missionary work to do."

The three Southern moderates who supported him were Terry Sanford, N. C., Donald Russell, S. C., and Carl Saunders of Georgia.

Meanwhile Florida's delegates were threatening to walk out and were stopped only by an impassioned plea from Sen. George Smathers. Louisiana and Arkansas were also unhappy. If the compromise was not accepted, it was predicted that the entire South would leave Atlantic City.

Three Northern Governors also carried weight in the secret meeting: Karl Rolvaag, Minn.; Harold Hughes, Ia.; and Endicott Peabody, Mass., whose mother went to jail as a Civil Rights demonstrator in St. Augustine. They too urged that the South be given more time.

Thus the compromise was finally accepted.

Giant Stride Forward

Mississippi Freedom demonstrators who had sat in the hot sun all day keeping silent vigil in front of the Convention Hall, stood up when they heard the news. They were bitterly disappointed.

What they did not know was that, for the first time in history, a Democratic convention had gone on record against denial of minority voting in the South, and that if the pattern set at Atlantic City is now followed there will be a political revolution in Dixie.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Sedalia motorcycle racers did well in the Tourist Trophy Races held in Topeka, Kansas. Johnny Rector and Benny Roberts took first places in a number of events. Rector won the final race and received a beautiful trophy.

FORTY YEARS AGO

A petition for grading and paving Sixteenth street from Ohio avenue east to Engineer avenue is being circulated. Alderman J. N. Wilkerson says a considerable number of signatures has been obtained. The Twelve Mile Road commission has promised to gravel Sixteenth street from Engineer to Marshall providing the other paving is done.

First American gasoline automobile was built by Charles and Frank Duryea in 1893.

Buddhist-Catholic Clash Is Basically Political

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — There is a steadily growing conflict between Buddhists and Catholics in South Viet Nam.

It appears to be a political confrontation — not a religious conflict. It is due in great measure to the weakness of South Viet Nam's political parties.

These are conclusions I've drawn after talks with dozens of Buddhists and equal numbers of Catholics in Saigon and in the provinces of Viet Nam.

In the United States, people wanting to have a voice in government can gain that voice through a political party. Some exert their influence through a variety of organizations.

In South Viet Nam, the political organizations are pitifully weak. Other organizations—such as labor unions, farmer co-operatives, parent-teacher associations or Chambers of Commerce — are either non-existent or insignificant in strength.

Only three groups — the military, the Catholics and the Buddhists — have the size, the organization and thus the potential for political power.

The Diem government had the backing of the Catholic group. That group is well educated. Because of the French educational system, a great share of the upper echelon of government society in French Indochina and later in South Viet Nam was historically either Catholic or educated in Catholic schools.

In a very real sense the Catholic-educated people formed the ruling upper class. This was not through trickery or unfairness. It was simply the fact of life resulting from the French colonial educational system, plus an active Catholic missionary effort led by able Western and Vietnamese priests.

Many Buddhists I talked to in Viet Nam were resentful because they believed President Diem had favored the Catholics. Though most believe Khanh tried to be fair, some think he should have done more to make up for what they call "past discriminations."

Most Vietnamese are Buddhists — at least nominally. The total may be 80 to 85 per cent. Less than 10 per cent are Catholic.

Whatever the history, many Buddhists now want a greater say in Vietnamese affairs. They are impatient with educational requirements which they feel favor those who have gone to Catholic schools.

Some Buddhist leaders are beginning to understand the potential nonreligious political power the large but loose-knit Buddhist "organizations" give them. Some Catholic leaders have reached the same understanding.

In all this I could find no evidence of religious intolerance, either on the side of the Catholics or the Buddhists.

Realizing this political potential, the Communist Viet Cong have set out to infiltrate South Viet Nam's Buddhist groups.

Vietnamese Buddhits told me it was simple for a man to become a Buddhist monk novitiate. He had only to shave his head, put on a robe and apply for admission. By Buddhist rules no questions can be asked.

"I am certain the Viet Cong have already infiltrated many Buddhist temples," one sincere Buddhist said to me sadly. The Buddhist governor of a South Viet Nam province told me the same thing as we flew together on a plane to Saigon.

These are suppositions. I was unable during my stay in South Viet Nam to find anyone who had facts on Red penetration of South Viet Nam Buddhism.

Where Are The Kids?

Said the puppy to the kitty cat:
"The house seems mighty still —
"There's Mary's doll and Johny's bat —
"And where is little Bill?"
"I've wondered, too," the kitty said,
"Wherever could they be —
"Do you suppose they're still in bed?
"Why don't we go and see."
Into the boys' room did they go,
Searched every corner, every nook,
They looked high and they looked low
But it did them no good to look —
Then into Mary's room they went,
And looked it carefully o'er,
They still could smell the bath salts scent
Come through the bathroom door —
So kitty softly snooped around
To see if she was there.
No little Mary could be found
In that house — anywhere —
From room to room they wandered,
Then out onto the lawn —
"Where had they gone?" they pondered,
"Where had the children gone?"
The duckling that was Johnny's pet
Was out there all alone
And they could hear that duckling fret —
His quack was high pitched tone,
There were the bike and other things
With which the children play,
The doll house, sand pile and the swings,
But the kids now — where were they?
And so they wanted in once more,
The pup barked: "Let us in!"
And Mommy came right to the door
Then she began to grin —
"You're wondering 'bout the kids, I know —
"And just where they can be —
"You're lost today — you plainly show —
"And that's the way with me —
"But each September it's this way
"For me — and for you, too,
"The kids went back to school today —
"There's nothing we can do,
"I know that it seems very queer
"For always we've had one
"But, Bill, too, starts to school this year
"And now that leaves us none
The house seems awfully quiet,
"No dashing in and out.
No 'Mom can I buy it?'
"No thunderous Indian shout
"No racing through the doors,
"No tracking in of dirt,
"No squealing and no roars,
"Nobody getting hurt—"
Then Mommy turns back to the sink
And they go back to bed.

AT A LODGE where a Sedalia family was vacationing there were mounted heads of deer and other animals on the walls and on the floor was a bear-skin rug.

The tiny boy was immediately attracted to the rug. But he felt a little sadness about seeing the bear there.

"Daddy," he asked, why did they kill the bear?"

That was one of the millions of questions his child asked, like all fathers, that he didn't know, and he just told him he didn't know.

"But why did they have to kill the bear, Daddy?" he insisted.

"I don't know," said the father, "I guess because they wanted to."

"But, Daddy," the child said looking at the rug flat on the floor, "why did they have to smash the bear?" — H. L.

The Ghetto of Thoughts

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Almost 1,000 years ago, groups of Jewish people were crowded into segregated areas and forced to live there under duress. Ghettoes persisted through European history. Crowded, dirty and denied many facilities, those who lived in these areas developed a culture and a fierce desire for freedom.

The last ghetto was outlawed in 1870 but great groups of people continued to live in these centuries-old areas. The houses of those who lived there caught fire easily and were frequently laid waste by conflagrations. A visit to Warsaw and Amsterdam reveals remnants of these original ghettoes.

Now another kind of ghetto has seen the flames and the violent conflagration. In Harlem, an area of 3.5 miles, there is a concentration of 232,000 persons, most of them Negroes. Similar concentration in varying degrees exist in most American cities. No law compels these residents to live there. It is rather economic necessities that create the ghetto.

The tragic riots and illegal violence frighten cities and only underline the basic needs. There is no justification for the violence. There is the need to solve the social situations which are illustrated by the violence.

Ghettoes are always bad. Yet there is another kind of ghetto, namely, the ghetto mind or ghetto way of thinking, that is as bad. It is the insistence that nothing can be done. It is what the Old Testament called hardness of heart.

It coalesces into a crowded, dimensioned area of the mind all of the emotions and attitudes and there along the narrow, dirty streets of prejudiced thinking, refuses to see what can be done in any constructive way.

Ghetto thinking affects people of all classes, all colors, all groups. It expresses such rigid and hardened attitudes that you might as well try to give a blood transfusion to a boulder as to try to "come and let us reason together."

As William Barrett in his study of man has insisted, man is willing to learn about himself only after some disaster. "What he learns has always been there, being concealed beneath the surface of even the best-functioning societies; it is no less true for having come out of a period of chaos and disaster. But so long as man does not have to face up to the truth, he will not do so."

None of us are compelled to live in these ghetto areas of our thoughts. None of us are forced to have narrow, twisted areas of such attitudes. As Rabbi Heschel once stated, "The greatest heresy is despair, despair of man's power for goodness, man's power for love."

It is this power which is on the side of humanity. It is the expression of this power, this willingness to transcend his old past and reach out to a new community of understanding which is one of man's greatest assets for good. It is tragic to have ghettoes of residence in our attitudes toward one another. This is not the time for such despair.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Mushroom Hunters Can Make Mistakes

By Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D.,
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Along with a football practice and gradual shortening of the days comes an outdoor sport indulged in by braver souls than I am — collecting mushrooms. Each year brings its reports of mushroom poisoning so don't let an "honest mistake" shorten your days. There are more than 3,000 species of this plant, and it would take a real expert to be familiar with half of them.

To complicate matters, poisonous and nonpoisonous varieties are often deceptively similar. This is especially apt to fool you if you are gathering mushrooms in a part of the country that is new to you. Other reasons why toadstool poisoning continues to occur are that the poisonous varieties do not have an unpleasant taste or smell and their color is not a reliable key to identifying "brand X." Even in the laboratory there is no simple test that will reveal all the poisons found in these plants.

Some persons become ill after eating mushrooms when no one else in the party is affected. This is due to allergy and is not to be considered true mushroom poisoning. The latter may be rapid or delayed. The rapid type usually occurs within two hours of eating the mushrooms and is caused by the poison muscarine. The result is severe abdominal pain, violent diarrhea, salivation, sweating and shortness of breath. Atropine, if given promptly, will prevent death.

Delayed poisoning does not occur until 6 to 15 hours after the mushrooms are eaten. The symptoms are similar to those of the acute poisoning. Hospitalization and the use of the artificial kidney are required to overcome this disease.

To be perfectly safe you should eat only mushrooms grown for the market or raised in your basement from known edible stock. If you insist on combining mushroom gathering with a traipse in the woods, you should study a good guide book carefully. Bold mushroom eaters rarely get to be old mushroom eaters. Some of the volumes which mushroom hunters rely upon:

"Common Edible Mushrooms" by Clyde M. Christensen, "Field Book of Common Mushrooms," by William Sturgis, "The Mushroom Hunter's Field Guide," by Alexander H. Smith.

Q — Would taking one diuretic pill daily for 14 days before each menstrual period have a bad effect on the kidneys? It is taken to prevent painful swelling in my fingers, wrists, and knees which disappears as soon as I start to menstruate.

OWEN FOX

Pettis County
Extension Youth Agent

Dates Ahead

Monday, Aug. 31 — Pick up 4-H Exhibits at State Fair 4-H Building, 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

4-H Is For You

If you're between 9 and 18, whether you live on a farm or off the farm, you may join a 4-H Club. Already more than 39,000 other young people have joined in Missouri.

What Are 4-H Clubs?

They are groups of young people, like yourself, who learn by doing. They elect their own club officers and run their own club meetings, under the guidance of volunteer adult leaders and parents.

What Can You Do?

Project work is the basis of all 4-H Club work. You can select from 75 different projects varying from electricity, clothing, junior leadership, photography and automobiles to agricultural projects like beef, swine, crops, horsemanship and many others. Almost anything you want to do or learn is included.

And all members join in the group recreation including folk dancing, skating parties, wiener roasts, and hayrides. County 4-H camps are held each summer in the State Parks, where swimming, crafts, and fun are the order of the day.

Each club also selects an activity in which all members take part — such as grooming, first aid, conservation, safety, community improvement, and courtesy. Health is an activity important to all clubs. Each 4-H group sponsors its own health program, whether it is seeing the dentist, getting a physical check-up or getting polio vaccinations.

Is the work rewarding? You bet it is! Not only from the satisfaction of working with others your own age and with your own interests, but also in the form of awards — ranging from ribbons to college scholarships.

All members have opportunities to enter achievement days and local fairs to exhibit their project work. Winners are selected to go to district and state events. And members work toward winning the big trips to National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, National 4-H Conference in Washington and many other exciting trips.

How Can I Join?

If there is a club in your community, find out where they meet and join at their next meeting. The club will be glad to have you as one of their members. October and November are the months to join. If you don't know the leader's name in your community call the University Extension Center and we can give you this information.

How to Organize a 4-H Club?

If there isn't a club in your community, you may want to help organize one. Here is how you do it.

1. Get five or more boys and girls together who are about the same age and are interested in doing the same things.
2. Secure parents' consent to join a 4-H Club.
3. Ask an adult to serve as a leader.
4. Call a meeting of all prospecitve members, parents, and leaders.
5. Call the University Extension Center and ask a speaker to attend your meeting to explain 4-H Club work.
6. For more details contact the University Extension Center.

For Organized Clubs

For 4-H Clubs that are already organized, October is time to elect new officers, select community leader and project leaders for the new year, select new projects, and select projects for the new year.

Parents Cooperation in 4-H

The most successful 4-H members have the interest and support of their parents. If you have a boy or girl in 4-H Club work and are wondering just how you can help, here are some suggestions.

Learn what 4-H is about, its purposes and objectives and the work required of the members.

Attend 4-H Club functions.

Serve as a leader or lend a hand wherever needed.

Help your child select a project that he or she will like, one that he will have the ability to do, and one for which you can furnish the facilities and materials.

Give encouragement and guidance in projects but place full responsibility for the actual work on your boy or girl. Do not do the work for the boy or girl. If you do, ask yourself this question: "Who is supposed to be leearning?"

Go to the monthly community meetings with your son or daughter. If you are at the meeting, you will know what is expected of them. See that they have a way to get to the project meetings.

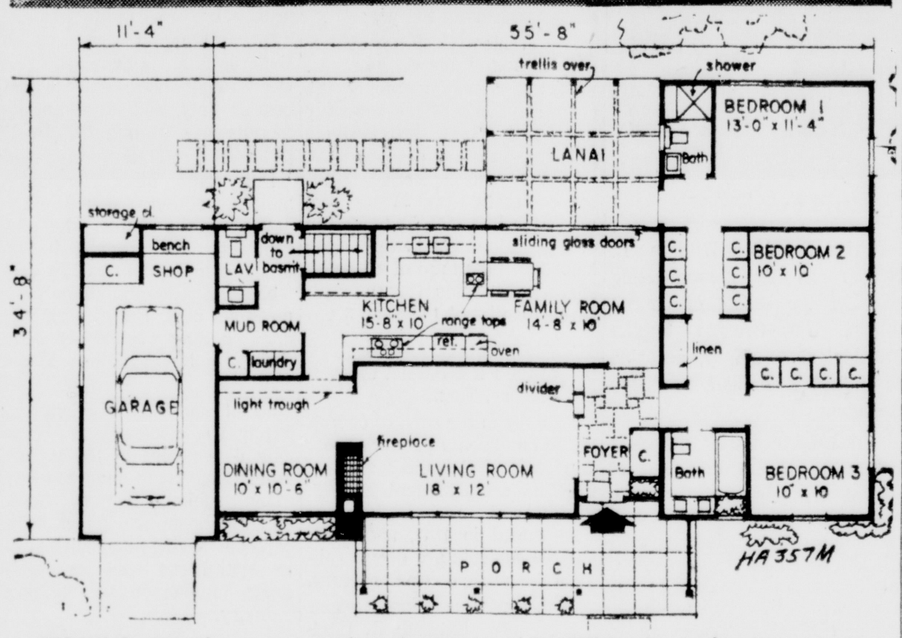

Give you child the opportunity to participate in local and county activities such as 4-H Achievement Days, 4-H Camps, 4-H Sunday and 4-H Recognition Night.

Promote an attitude of good sportsmanship by maintaining good sportsmanship qualities yourself. Your son or daughter may not receive the ribbon that you expected them to receive. If they receive a white ribbon, here is an opportunity to encourage them to do better quality work.

Show appreciation to local leaders. Remember, they voluntarily gave their time and talent so your children could have the same opportunities as those in other communities.

Two Moments Of Sadness Amid Hoopla

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Amid all the sound and fury, the oratory and the cheers, two quiet scenes recorded in close-up by the television cameras provided emotion-filled moments on the final anti-climatic day of the Democratic National Convention.

First, around noon on NBC, there was the moment at a reception for Jacqueline Kennedy after some of the late president's favorite prose and poetry had been read movingly by Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March. There was a suggestion of tears, it seemed to this viewer, as the former first lady, in a soft, almost inaudible voice, thanked "all of you who made his shining years possible."

Then, when the convention crowd almost blew off the roof in a 12-minute demonstration, the cameras lingered on the sad face of its object, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. He stood, as if alone, looking as one viewer said "like a young boy close to tears."

As if reading minds, NBC's Chet Huntley observed at the end of the demonstration that "each individual must deduce on his own what this means — whether it is his (Kennedy's) own or because he's the symbol of his brother."

Two films occupied considerable time at the convention and on the three networks Thursday night. The first CBS' Eric Severeid dismissed as "a typical campaign biography" of the presidential candidate, consisting of a batch of film clips narrated in early "March of Time" style. It contrasted sharply with an imaginative well-edited film memoir, "A Thousand Days," of the late President John F. Kennedy, which produced an emotional reaction in the hall — and in millions of homes.

After watching the goings-on, first in San Francisco and then in Atlantic City, one can fairly conclude that television networks are physically, electronically and intellectually capable of the remarkable job of bringing a political convention into the living rooms of the nation.

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: In 1954 I married a man I hated because my mother talked me into it. He was 12 years older than I, had a little money, and my mother said I would learn to love him later. This man turned out to be an animal. He was brutal and demanding.

I'm not making excuses for myself but I began to see a man at work and fell in love with him. He returned that love. I asked my husband for a divorce. His answer was "never."

I became pregnant by my boy friend and still my husband refused to give me a divorce. When I checked into the hospital to have the baby I used my husband's name. The birth certificate reads that he is the father.

Six months later my husband met a girl he liked, so he gave me a divorce. I married the father of my child. Now I want to get the birth certificate changed so it reads as it should. How can I do it?—B.F.G.

Dear B.F.G.: The certificate DOES read as it should. Leave it alone.

The law doesn't care who you were going with when the baby was born. The law is concerned only with your legal status, and at the time the baby was born you were married to your first husband. So forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm almost 17 and have never had an honest-to-goodness date. Several fellows have asked me to go to the movies or to a party, but it was either fixed up by someone else or the invitation went like this: "I'm in a spot. Judy got the measles and I need a date for the dance tomorrow night. Can you go?" I feel more like a rescue squad than a female.

At least once a week some fellow drives over to talk to me about a love problem he is having with another girl. They all want advice, because I am so "sensible," but nobody wants ME. I'm getting tired of lending them my shoulder to cry on. Does this role ever lead to romance?—THE SISTERLY TYPE

Dear Type: If the fellows cry on your shoulders it proves they know you have shoulders. Continue to give them your counsel and eventually someone will notice the rest of you.

The boy-girl relationships which begin on the platonic level are often the most solid. When the friendship catches fire—it's love.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to you about a problem that is giving me an ulcer. I need your help, because I'm no good at telling people off.

My husband's sister has a 16-year-old daughter who smokes. They are over here about five nights a week to look at our color TV. This girl drops ashes all over the rug and has burned two holes in my coffee table.

She has a habit of going to the refrigerator and helping herself. You'd think she never saw a pie, or a cake, or a cookie before,—the way she eats her way through my pantry.

Last night she ate half a jello mold I had prepared for my bridge club which is meeting today. I'm afraid if I tell my sister-in-law how I feel it will be the end of our friendship. Please advise me.—MYRTLE.

Dear Myrtle: What friendship? These freeloaders are using you and your color TV as their major form of entertainment.

This is more your fault than theirs. People who allow themselves to be dropped in on (5 nights a week yet!!), eaten out of house and home, and then get an ulcer because them haven't the courage to speak up, get no sympathy from me.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Home Building Lag Offset By Non-Residential Work

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —Home building lags but offsetting it is a big gain in contracts for non-residential construction.

As the economic upswing heads toward its 43rd month, a record for peacetime, some see the construction industry, a prime factor, pulling out of the leveling-off period that marked earlier months of the year.

The residential slump continues, in many areas, however, with few signs of joining the other segments of the economy that still point impressively higher.

In the non-residential building contracts were 22 per cent above the like months in 1963 in dollar value. And this gain helped pull the total of all building commitments for the first seven months of the year 8 per cent above the like period of 1963.

The midsummer advance in other than home building brought total construction contracts for the first seven months of 1964 to $28,697,365,000, also a gain of 8 per cent over the previous year.

July saw the first marked advance of the year, which otherwise had held nearly level after a late 1963 jump.

Office building was a weak sister in July. In contract value this category sagged by 20 per cent in July, and for the seven months was trailing 1963 by 10 per cent.

But some other forms of building activity looked much better for the future, when the contracts are translated into actual construction. In July contracts for school buildings were up 29 per cent. The gain for hospital building was 40 per cent, and for public buildings 36 per cent.

Street and highway contract letting was a weak spot, dropping 6 per cent in the month.

Mortgage costs have eased in many regions as the home building boom slackened while personal savings accounts grew in institutions that use such funds to finance the building industry.

The cheetah probably is the fastest animal in the world over short distances.

Storm-hunting Nimbus Satellite Is Launched

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A new storm-hunting Nimbus satellite vehicle rocketed into the sky early today with cameras designed to take 2,000 pictures of the world's weather every day.

It was aimed at a 575-mile-high polar orbit from which it could photograph every square mile of the rotating earth's cloud cover at least once a day.

Television cameras similar to those that took Ranger 7's historic close-ups of the moon and night-time infrared picture gear reportedly adapted from secret Samos and Midas space-spy satellites are expected to improve forecasters' ability to spot storms brewing far at sea.

Kettle Role Meant Fame For Kilbride

"What do I do? I do nothing," says Percy Kilbride. "I'm more or less a—well, you might call me a bum."

That's not likely. Kilbride is a spry, crickety, tweed-suited gentleman of 77 years. He is the only Boulevard regular who is recognized by the present generation of movie fans.

"Hey — you're Pa Kettle!" tourists shout at the trim-figured, hawk-nosed man. He gives them a half smile and a cock of the head, then hurries on his way. He spent a half century as an actor and finds that the public remembers him only as the hayseed Pa of the Kettle family series, which he recalls with distaste.

His career started in 1905 in his native San Francisco and nearly ended the next year in the earthquake. He survived but his theater didn't, and he began years of traveling with stock companies, playing a different melodrama weekly. He later made it to Broadway as a popular character man and came to films in the role he created on the stage in "George Washington Slept Here."

Kilbride enjoyed steady employment in films, often as a taxi driver, even though he didn't drive. Then fate was to cast him and Marjorie Main as the rambunctious Kettles in "The Egg and I."

The follow-up series was highly successful. But Kilbride was distressed at playing the same bucolic character, and the slapstick gag stunts were too violent for his delicate constitution.

"After my contract was up, I told the studio I wouldn't do any more," he said. "But then a new regime took over Universal. They offered me a limousine to and from work and an amazing amount of money.

"Well, I agreed to do one more. But I made them put in the contract that no one at the studio could even mention the possibility that I might do another one."

Kilbride limped through "Ma and Pa Kettle at Home," the seventh of the series. He was so ill and distressed by the end of it that he decided to close out his career.

That was 11 years ago, and he now appears as hale as in his prime as Pa Kettle.

High Blood Pressure Reduced When Cause Is Removed

The body controls the blood pressure by small nerves leading to the muscular layers of the blood vessels.

Worry, excitement, and faulty diet are all contributing factors to high blood pressure. In addition to the above mentioned factors, there are several underlying causes and two of the most common are (1) malfunctioning kidneys, made evident by eating too much salt and to help correct this problem the patient must go on a salt free diet, the (2nd) one being imbalance of the vaso-motor nervous system that controls the body's blood pressure, with the result that messages from the brain are wrongly interpreted so that they do not coordinate as they should with the rest of the body. Consequently, various forms of degeneration take place. Most commonly is hardening of the arteries.

Where some cases of severe high blood pressure may need some type of medication, most are caused by irritation of the nervous system and therefore respond very favorably to Chiropractic adjustments. Early diagnosis and adjustments may offset serious future developments of the disease.

Poor Vision— Clue to Juvenile Delinquency?

A study shows that 80 percent of children in trouble have learning problems—and 50 percent of this number can't see well; this is something parents should remember as their youngsters return to classes

By F. R. HILPERT Chief Clinical Psychologist to Sing Sing Prison, N. Y. as told to Jack Ryan

WE TAKE ALL SORTS of precautions to protect our youngsters from things which might lead to delinquency —bad companions, violent television programs, indecent books and movies.

Should we add still another "bad influence"—undetected poor vision?

It may seem farfetched to blame poor vision for a boy's rebelliousness and, subsequently, a life of crime, but I have before me a significant case history of a 42-year-old man which was compiled while he was in a state penitentiary for forgery. He was above average in intelligence; from a good home. Why did he turn to crime?

The case history slowly unfolds his secret in the course of discussions by the examining physician, psychologist, chaplain, educational director, and other penitentiary officials. In the transcript, the physician reveals the first clue:

"Oh, yes, there is one factor—his vision is quite bad, a condition apparently going back to his early childhood, but nothing was ever done to attempt to correct (it) . . . He was cooperative enough until I asked him for his educational background, at which time he told me flatly, 'Drop dead.'"

At another conference, the prison educational director adds a further clue: the forger was an eager student until the sixth grade, then encountered insurmountable but unexplained reading difficulties which led him to quit school later.

Then comes the psychologist: "He keeps calling himself 'dumb' and 'stupid.' He says to me, 'What can you expect of a guy with only an eighth-grade education?'" The psychologist learns that the forger advanced in his many jobs until he faced heavy paperwork, which he apparently could not handle.

Again and again, the examination came back to the fact that the forger had long been handicapped by visual deficiencies. The undetected affliction forced this man, despite his intelligence and ambitions, to drop out of school and lose jobs. At last, in bitter frustration and misunderstanding of his problem, he lashed out at society through forgery and drunkenness.

"My eyes always seemed to cross when I was a kid," he said, "especially when I got upset or tired . . . I could learn only by looking at the pictures or listening to the teacher, rather than reading. That's okay in the lower grades, but you have to read books as you go on."

HIS TYPE OF VISUAL DEFICIENCY could not be detected by a simple eye-chart test; only an examination by an eye specialist could have detected the complex affliction. The penitentiary provided glasses which allowed him to resume his studies without difficulty; he now operates his own small garage—handling all its paperwork.

Is this just a freak case? It's difficult to say at this stage of our investigation, but preliminary statistics indicate a definite link between visual defects and educational failure—and, still further, a strong link between educational failure and antisocial behavior.

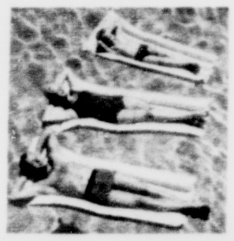

Several studies, including my own at Iowa State Prison and Sing Sing Prison, show that while inmates have less education than the general public, they are not inferior in intelligence. One test showed that 45 percent of prisoners could have finished high school (compared with 35 percent of the general population), yet only 13 percent did. Why? Finances, inadequate local schools, family pressures—and reading difficulties traceable to poor vision.

THE WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE on Juvenile Delinquency bears out various prison studies of my own. Up to 80 percent of the delinquents and semidelinquents studied by the Conference had learning difficulties, specifically in reading—and poor vision was found to be a contributing factor in 50 percent of these cases.

Obviously, the study of a link between reading-vision-delinquency is in its infancy. There is enough statistical evidence, though, to cause parents first to suspect imperceptible visual defects when a difficulty in learning and reading occurs rather suddenly; if an eye doctor rules this out, emotional problems may be the key. Several symptoms can be present: the child becomes fatigued easily or suffers car sickness; he shuns participation sports he once enjoyed.

And he frequently will become the classroom show-off, the kid who "tells off Teacher." Why? Basically, he is driven by the blind frustrations and dilemmas that motivated our forger. But with the bewildered classroom show-off, there is still time to head off later heartbreak.

You Can Be a Better Shopper

The energetic woman whose task it is to help you, the consumer, gives an exclusive report on what has been done and what needs to be done to make your shopping simpler and more economical

By Mrs. ESTHER PETERSON
Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs
With James C. G. Conniff

PHOTOGRAPH BY JACQUES HUTZLER

TODAY'S CONSUMER has one really big problem: the sheer abundance of the market place. From that overwhelming fact, all other problems arise.

When I was a girl in Provo, Utah, and went to the corner grocery, there may have been 300 items available there. This morning, when I did our family shopping, I made a rough estimate—and there were between 6,000 and 7,000 different products on the shelves!

At the corner grocery in Provo, Mr. Garrett was not only the proprietor but one of our closest family friends. We would ask him how this or that product would perform, and he could tell us. There is no person to do this today, no one who—amid such a Niagara of consumer products—could be expected to know.

For us, therefore, the package is the salesman. It must answer our questions about what the product is, what it does, how well it does it, what hazards if any we should guard against, and exactly how much we are getting for our money—and answer those questions honestly. But does every package do this? Unfortunately, not yet.

A frustrating example came up the other day when Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman and I addressed an outdoor gathering. The podium had been freshly painted, and he came off the stand with white paint all over his sleeve.

"What do I do?" he asked me.

"Let's look at the label and see what your suit is made of. Then we can decide whether to use gasoline or water or what," I answered. But unfortunately there was no fabric label anywhere on his suit.

Textile-labeling information may sometimes be inadequate, but it does not stand alone as an example of the consumer's main problem: how to find out, at a glance, those facts which he needs and has a right to know. The information blur aggravates him—and may cost him money—at every turn.

Since my appointment last January as Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs, I have talked to business and consumer groups all over this country and have followed up on consumer complaints which have poured into my office by the thousands. As a result, I have learned that the great majority of our businessmen want to do the right thing. In many cases, they maintain staffs to find out what the consumer is thinking, and they welcome the opportunity to make amends when a product fails to meet consumer expectations.

action involves those cardboard trays under prepackaged meats. Shoppers kept asking me: why not plastic trays to let us see whether, as sometimes happens, there is a chunk of bone or fat underneath? But when I asked meat-department managers, they said cardboard was necessary to absorb the juices.

That made some sense, but just to be sure I referred the complaint to the American Meat Institute—and today I am able to buy packaged meat in transparent plastic trays! I understand these trays also are in use on the West Coast. Chances are they'll replace the cardboard trays altogether, especially if enough shoppers keep asking at the local level.

A similar thing happened with bacon packages. Consumers had suffered more or less in silence with sealed packages which displayed the lean edge of the bacon but which concealed the sometimes excessive fat. Now there is a package which shows all. Hopefully, meat packers will adopt it as their stocks of the objectionable container are used up.

One of the most useful devices for giving the consumer the information he needs to shop economically is unit-cost labeling. You see it on prepackaged meat and cheese: this price for this weight at so much per pound. Recently I learned that some stores are responding to consumer demand by putting unit-cost labels on coffee. To protect the consumer, we can and should have such labeling on all our foods.

The contents of cans and packages also should be marked as simply as possible: in full ounces instead of in pounds and fractional ounces (or even in liters!) as they are now. Food processors already do this for their export markets. Why not for home consumption, too?

Although I had been a member of the National Consumers League for 30 years and on its board of directors for 15, I was amazed when I first saw my daughter Karen use a slide rule while shopping. "How else can you tell the best buys?" she asked. I began using one myself to determine comparative values, but that's no way to have to shop.

Individual consumers constitute the biggest spending group in our society. Their annual outlay—some $380 billion, or almost two-thirds of our $600-billion gross national product—includes such huge budget bites as $75 billion for food, $20 billion for furniture and household goods, and $30 billion for clothing and shoes. There is no reason why businessmen cannot help good customers like these to get their money's worth with labeling practices which are easier to understand.

Let's look at another example. Garment makers were bedeviled by shrinkage (most often in youngsters' blue jeans) in unquestionably shrinkproof fabric. When consumer complaints prompted an investigation, the trouble was found to be in the stitching thread. Now the industry is planning to use seam threads that are preshrunk, too. A like effort by thread makers to improve the tensile strength of their product would help curtail the exasperating experience of having thread break repeatedly while sewing.

These are some of the piecemeal gains already achieved. The broader goals include (1) consumer education, particularly for persons on limited income; (2) expansion of our Regional Consumer Conferences to learn from consumers themselves what their problems are and how we can help one another to solve them; and (3) looking into ways of coordinating the many services and publications by which Government departments and agencies aid the consumer.

WHERE THERE ARE GAPS, we will try to close them. An example is true interest rates in borrowing money, one of our biggest consumer labyrinths. At our request, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has just completed a clear, simple, pocket-size Consumer's Quick Credit Guide. Available free, it tells at a glance all the consumer needs to know about shopping for a loan or buying on time. With credit as the source of financing for everything from homes to education, from cars and appliances to travel, we think the Guide is an invaluable aid to consumers.

We seek to let the consumers know that they now have a voice in the high councils of their government—and that they should use it. How? Not by threatening; industry wants to know what's wrong. But that doesn't mean you should write to the president of the firm right away. First give the local merchant or store manager a chance to consider your problem.

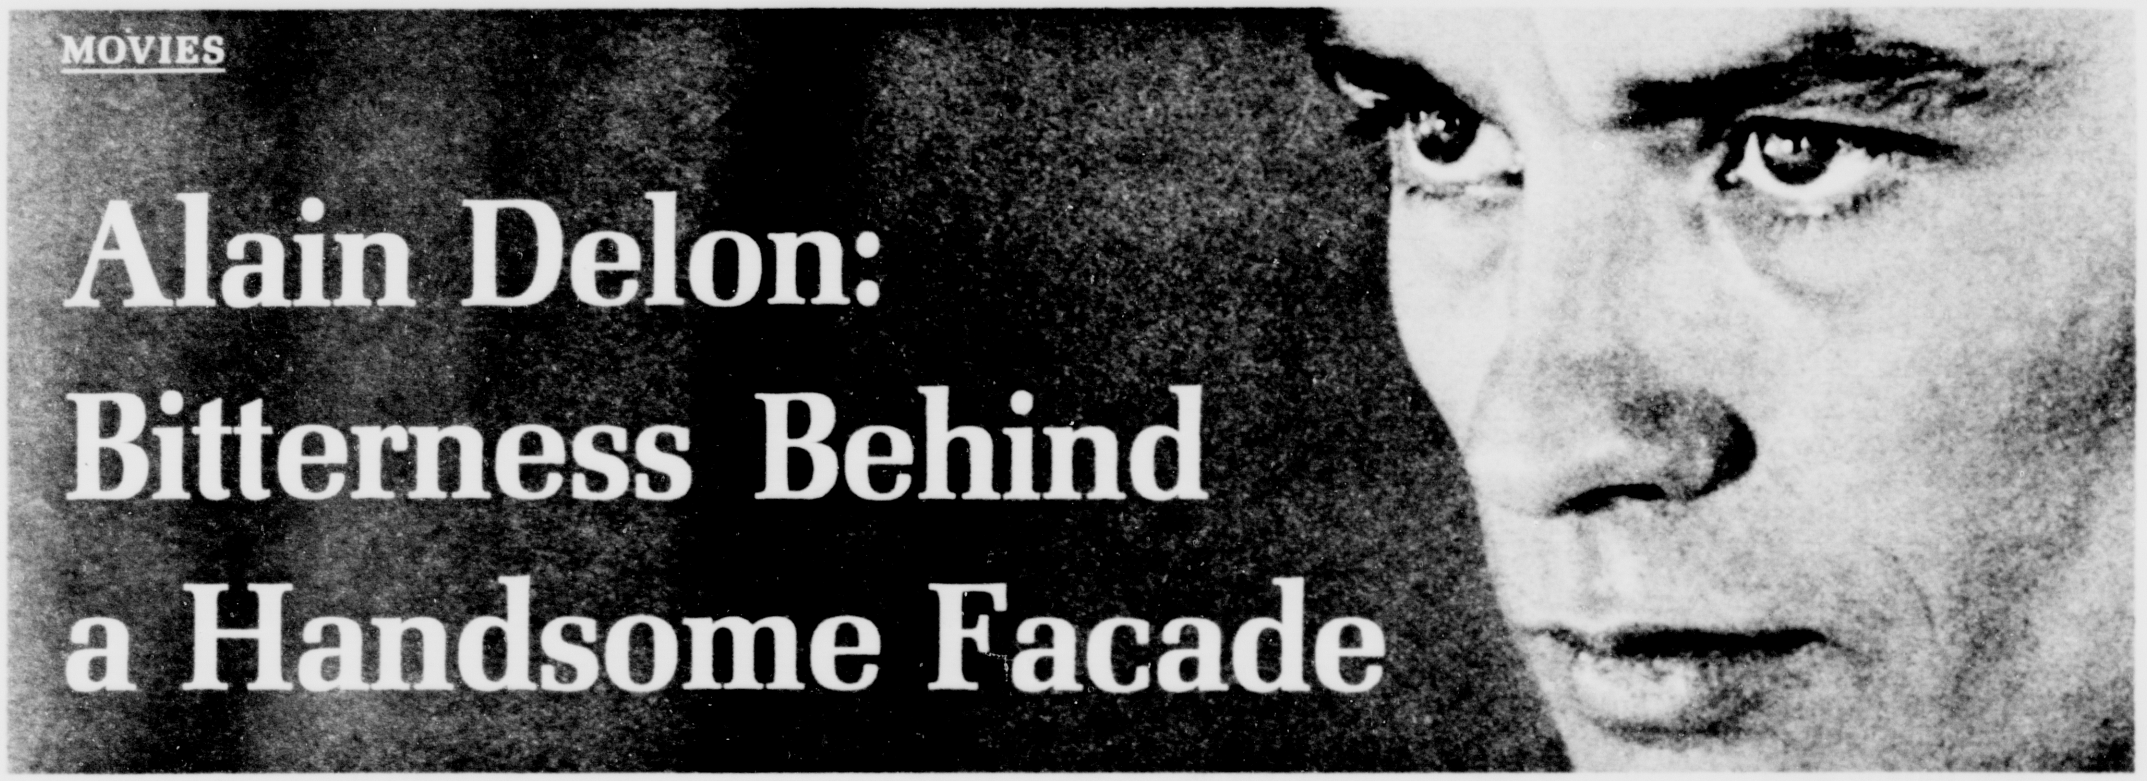

When consumers ask me whether it's illegal for them to inspect a prepackaged cut of meat by breaking the seal, for example, I tell them that out of regard for health regulations they should ask the manager to do it for them. This sound and considerate procedure should apply with a complaint of any sort. But if the local man can't help, then you should go higher.

Like anyone else, I hate to wrestle with the problem of "economy-size" purchases, slide rule or no slide rule. Recently, I saw the dry milk we use offered at 14 quarts for 99 cents or 20 quarts for $1.49. I was all set to buy the 20 until I did some quick figuring. The first 50 cents would buy seven quarts, and so would the second 50 cents. But the next 49 cents would buy only six quarts. So the "economy" buy was the more expensive; you were short one quart! The lesson here is: don't make a habit of mistrust—but do use your head.

THERE IS A LESSON for the merchant, too: play fair with your customers. Don't advertise specials you know you'll be out of soon after the doors open. Don't use come-on ads like the Washington car dealer's headline, "Imagine–$1,000 for your 1960 car!" When prospects drove in, he told them he was just asking them to imagine that much for a 1960 car.

At the end of the year, I plan to take inventory and report to the President on how things are going so that he can make appropriate recommendations to the Congress. It is a bit early to be specific about that report, but two things it will stress are already clear: (1) consumers owe it to themselves and to American business to make their views known to the consumer-relations departments which companies maintain for that very purpose and to such Government agencies as the Post Office Department, the Federal Trade Commission, and my own office which stand ready to protect the consumer; and (2) each group owes it to our country's well-being to do all it possibly can to banish forever that cruel motto, "Let the buyer beware."

I suggest in its place the more honest slogan, "Let there be full disclosure"—of everything the consumer needs to know, whether he's borrowing money, shopping for a new home or car, or trying to decide which can of peas is the better buy at his local grocery store.

Alain Delon: Bitterness Behind a Handsome Facade

New screen triumphs loom ahead for this fast-rising French star; yet success has failed to heal the painful wounds of an unhappy childhood

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

AS I GOT INTO Alain Delon's convertible with him and his girl friend, he asked, "Would you prefer to have the top up or down?"

When I said it didn't really matter to me, he cryptically commented, "It's safer down."

My expression must have indicated that I didn't get the point because he added, "Then if we hit something, we'll be thrown clear."

I knew what he meant seconds after he turned on the ignition. Barely missing pedestrians, cyclists, oncoming cars, and other obstacles, we careened along the narrow, winding road that led out of Lyon, France, where he was on location for the film, "Have I the Right to Kill?" It was a fearful experience for me, but for Alain and his girl, it apparently was a common occurrence. As we screeched around curves, she calmly massaged the nape of Alain's neck!

In an incredibly short time we arrived at a country restaurant, La Mer Brazier. The food was good—as was Alain's mood. Although he has a reputation for sometimes being difficult during interviews, he was cooperative and frank.

Delon stars with Jane Fonda in "The Love Cage."

Yet there was an underlying note of bitterness and cynicism. Why should this be true in a man whose career as the top young male star in French films seems about to be duplicated in America, where he will star opposite Jane Fonda, Shirley MacLaine, and Ann-Margret in a series of MGM films?

I soon learned at least part of the reason as he recalled his early life.

"I was born in the French village of Sceaux, where my father owned a theater," Alain told me. "But my parents were divorced when I was four. After that, I didn't see much of either one. Both of them remarried and had more children, and I didn't seem to belong anywhere.

"I was really reared by a guardian, but eventually my parents sent me to boarding school. During vacation I would go to my father, who would then send me to my mother, who would then send me back to my father, and on and on. Nobody wanted me.

"At 14 I tried to run away to the United States. I made it to Bordeaux but was caught just as I tried to board a ship. They locked me up and called my mother, who then called my father to have him pick me up. But he said, 'Leave him where he is. It will teach him a lesson.' Well, he finally had to come and get me and put me back in boarding school."

But Alain didn't stay there long. "I was expelled from every school in which I was enrolled," he recalled. His mother kept asking him why he didn't join the military, so finally he did just that. "I felt fighting for my country could be no worse than fighting with my family all the time."

He was 17 when he became a marine—but it didn't help. "I was sent to Indo-China, where we were hated by everyone," he mused.

Three times Alain became a noncommissioned officer, and three times he was reduced to private again (on one occasion he took a jeep and drove it into the Saigon River, which earned him three months in the brig).

He didn't have many friends in the service, either. "In the five years I served in the marines, I grew up fast. I accepted the fact that a man has to be alone. I also learned to be frightened of death and that you must learn to kill or be killed. I've since come to the conclusion that this holds true in any kind of profession, though not literally, of course!"

What made him most bitter was that during the years he spent in Indo-China, when his life hung in the balance almost every day, "neither my parents nor my aunts and uncles nor anyone else cared. All my buddies got packages from home, but I never got one. I didn't want to take anything from the other men because I could never offer anything in return."

DELON WAS 22 when he was discharged from the service and went back to Paris. There, he became an actor by accident. "A lot of people told me I was good-looking and asked why I didn't make a picture. Finally a director's wife introduced me to her husband, and he offered me the part of a young killer. Once I went to work, it was love at first take. I suddenly felt in my element. I knew I photographed well, so I relaxed."

That was in 1954. He made his first major film in 1959 and soon became one of the most sought-after young leading men in France.

Today Alain owns a beautiful estate outside Paris. It consists of a church, the priest's quarters—in which he lives—a cemetery, and adjoining land. "The church is still being used for services once a week," he told me.

He also has an apartment in Monte Carlo and a five-story home in Paris, which he shares with his friend and manager George Beaume.

After a six-year romance with Romy Schneider, Alain finally split up with the German actress for the simple reason that she wanted to get married and he didn't. And his reason for wanting to stay single is sad and cynical: "I don't want to have any children. I know full well what it means to be a child, and I don't want to be responsible for anyone else going through those terrible early years."

Tea 'n Lemon Cake

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ⅔ cup butter
- 4 teaspoons grated lemon peel
- ¾ teaspoon vanilla extract
- ⅓ cup sugar
- ⅔ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
- 4 egg yolks (about ½ cup), well beaten
- ⅔ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons instant tea
- 4 egg whites (about ½ cup)
- ⅓ cup sugar

1. Blend the flour and baking powder; set aside.

2. Cream butter with the lemon peel and extract. Gradually add the ⅓ cup sugar and the confectioners' sugar, creaming until fluffy after each addition.

3. Add beaten egg yolks gradually to the creamed mixture, beating thoroughly after each addition.

4. Gradually add the milk to the instant tea, stirring until the tea is dissolved.

5. Beating until smooth after each addition, alternately add dry ingredients in thirds and liquid in halves to creamed mixture. Finally, beat the batter only until smooth (do not overbeat).

Carefully spread beaten egg whites over batter and gently fold together until blended. Turn batter into a greased 2-qt. fluted tubed mold.

7. Bake at 350°F about 45 min., or until cake tester or wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean.

8. Cool on rack in pan 10 min.; invert cake on rack, remove pan, and cool. Sift vanilla confectioners' sugar lightly over top of cake before serving. 8 to 10 servings

Marinated Black Pepper Steak

The amount of cracked pepper used on this steak depends completely on personal taste. As a rough guide, two teaspoonfuls for each side of a large steak isn't too much.

Purchase a sirloin steak, cut 1½ to 2 in. thick. (Allow ¾ to 1 lb. per person.) Put steak into a large, shallow pan, cover with steak marinade and allow to marinate several hours or overnight. Before grilling, remove steak from marinade and press coarsely crushed peppercorns liberally into both sides of steak. Grill 3 to 4 in. from coals, allowing about 15 min. for total grilling time; turn once. Test doneness by slitting meat near bone and noting color of meat. To serve, cut steak diagonally into thin slices.

W. Averell Harriman Tells About

"THE KHRUSHCHEV I KNOW"

This veteran U.S. diplomat has been complimented—

and castigated— by Russia's wildly changeable dictator

By MARYA SAUNDERS

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV broke into a grin as he saw W. Averell Harriman, U.S. Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs, stride into the Moscow conference room on opening day of the test-ban treaty negotiations.

"You're absolutely blooming," Khrushchev said as he greeted the 72-year-old diplomat. "What are you doing, counting your years backward?"

The Soviet ruler was in a friendly, back-slapping mood. "Let's sign now and let the technicians settle the details later," he said the moment Harriman slipped into his seat at the large table.

Despite the opening-day smiles, it took 10 long days to hammer out a final draft of the historic but still controversial treaty. "I can assure you," Harriman told me later in a special interview for FAMILY WEEKLY, "that by the time the treaty was signed July 25, 1963, we had argued over every article, every paragraph, every sentence, every phrase of it. I think you can feel safe that the treaty is very clear—no misunderstandings, no hidden traps."

The treaty was a tribute not only to Harriman's skill as a negotiator but to his keen insight into the Russian character and the Khrushchev personality. "I've been visiting Russia as a private citizen and on government missions since 1926," Harriman told me. "I've gotten to know Chairman Khrushchev quite well."

THE EVENING after they initialed the treaty, Harriman and Khrushchev walked together through a Moscow park. When the people saw Khrushchev, they began to applaud, and a little girl ran up to him. He patted her on the head, pinched another child's cheek, and shook many of the hands outstretched to him. Then he pointed to Harriman and said: "This is Gospodin (Mr.) Harriman. I'm going to take him to dinner. He has just signed the test-ban agreement. Do you think he has earned his dinner?" The people cheered.

Khrushchev's striking contrast to Stalin was particularly apparent to Harriman at that moment. "Stalin would never have walked among the people," Harriman told me. "He was a ruthless, coldly impersonal despot who ruled the country by terror, whereas Khrushchev likes the people. He rules the country just as firmly but, instead of terrifying knocks on doors at midnight, he controls the people by stern discipline. It isn't the kind of life any of us would like, however."

Harriman found that, while Khrushchev likes to joke, he is essentially a tough and powerful man who can be blunt and brutal when he finds it necessary. "I wept when Stalin died," Khrushchev told Harriman. "After all, we were his pupils. Stalin fought barbarism with barbarism, but he was a great man."

Harriman says he is certain Khrushchev means it when he states there can be no coexistence between communism and capitalism. The U.S. diplomat explained: "We are enemies of what he wants to achieve. America wants a world in which men and nations are free, while the Communists are determined to create a world with rigid central control over every aspect of life. And they are prepared to use any methods to succeed."

One instance when Khrushchev's amiable mask dropped away revealing the doctrinaire hard-core Communist beneath was in 1959. President Eisenhower had asked the Soviet leader to come to the United States, and Harriman invited him to his home to meet 30 special guests, a cross section of American businessmen.

"I hoped meeting these men would help him to understand us," Harriman told me. "The afternoon began quite pleasantly. My daughter Kathy, who had been with me in Moscow when I was the ambassador, delighted the Premier by greeting him at the door in Russian. But when he was introduced to the guests he said bluntly, 'You rule America. You are the ruling circle. I don't believe any other view.'"

KHRUSHCHEV almost irrationally lost his temper, called everyone a capitalist, shook his fist, and got red in the face. The atmosphere was strained, and Harriman's only satisfaction was that the group of Americans present had seen what the true Khrushchev was like, totally dispelling the image he likes to promote of a benevolent Russian father of the old school.

Such is the volatile nature of the Khrushchev personality that his outburst didn't end his bantering relationship with Harriman. "When I talked to him later, he called me an imperialist," Harriman said. "I reminded him that earlier in my home he had called me a capitalist, and I asked him whether it was a demotion or a promotion. He allowed that it was a promotion and said, 'A capitalist is a man who exploits the people in his own country, whereas an imperialist exploits the people in other countries.'"

Harriman continued: "Russian people crave peace more than anything else. And, in spite of the fact that their leaders hold us up as imperialists, they also hold us up as the nation to emulate. 'Catch the United States' is a slogan in all their factories.

"The people want our friendship. I was very aware of this feeling when I sat with Khrushchev and his wife at a Soviet-American track meet. At the end of the meet, both teams walked arm in arm around the stadium carrying Soviet flags next to American ones. There was very good feeling between them. As the colors of our nations came by, Khrushchev said, 'We must stand.' As we stood, the crowd applauded wildly. I saw tears in Khrushchev's eyes, and we all felt moved.

"It would be wonderful if someday there could be a real friendship between our people," Harriman said, "but it isn't true today."

I was just thinking...

IMAGINE HOW WONDERFUL it could be if this were our last day on earth.

Nobody'd want to set off a bomb because there'd be no point to it—as if there ever were.

Fidel wouldn't have time to call on Nikita, or vice versa. The Chinese would remember the ancestors they've been ignoring and would be so involved in preparing to enter the Gate of Heaven they couldn't fight with anyone.

Students everywhere wouldn't organize demonstrations or panty raids. They'd all go home to their families or fall in love again.

Nobody would have to wonder where the money's coming from to meet next month's bills, so they'd relax and enjoy what they have.

Thieves wouldn't steal because you can't take it with you, and nobody would sue anybody else because the case would never get to court.

Old enemies would kiss and make up, just in case there's something to this heaven bit after all. And there would be no point in starting a quarrel because there wouldn't be time to decide who's right and who's wrong.

The Berlin Wall would be abandoned, and all the severed families would never be separated again. No politician would make any campaign promises because there would be nothing to promise. And the politicians already in office would hurry to make their campaign promises come true so they wouldn't lose the most important Election of all.

Ministers would be about the busiest men on earth, but they'd think they were already in heaven. Their churches would be full, and a whole army of argumentative atheists and agnostics would be too busy praying to argue.

All the executives and laborers and harried housewives who never have time to notice how beautiful the world is would notice for the first time since childhood. They would see the beauty of a flower and a leaf and the last sunset with a perception beyond anything they'd ever known.

Those who love one another but keep forgetting would open their hearts in simple devotion and open their eyes to the majesty of man's immortal soul.

And, in that case, the world might never end at all. The last day on earth would last forever because, at last, we would have learned how to appreciate it.

I Survived the Deadly Everglades

By MALCOLM JONES as told to George J. Jaffe

Exhausted, I sat beside my unconscious buddy. Alligators kept vigil near the crashed plane.

AS BILL LINDSEY'S four-seater plane plummeted toward the black Florida swamp, I was sure it was carrying me to death.

But, as it turned out, it wasn't the plane crash that I had to fear. It was the following 72-hour nightmare!

For, while Bill, my friend and coworker at a Key West (Fla.) auto agency, lay unconscious on a wing of the wreckage, I spent three days and two nights wandering through one of America's largest alligator breeding pits.

Bill and I had cranked up his plane at Fort Lauderdale, where we'd attended a business meeting. It hummed like a kitten. The weather people had told us it would be a good night for flying. We lifted off for home at 11:22 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 16.

Settling back to grab a snooze, I said, "Great flying tonight, eh, Bill?"

When he didn't answer, I looked outside the plane. At that moment, we were enveloped by a strange white cloud. It seemed to put a big down pressure on the plane's nose.

In five seconds we fell from 1,500 to 300 feet. I watched, helpless, as Bill fought the controls. For a split second they seemed to hold a little, but then we shot downward at a 45-degree angle.

At 50 feet, and going 160 knots, I took my last look at the instruments and thought about my wife and four kids. I prayed. This was it!

Somehow, I landed in the swamp water of the Everglades lying on my back on top of the plane door. It saved my life. I saw the outline of Bill's body, about 10 feet away. He was face down in 10 inches of water.

As I groped through the muck to reach him, I took stock of my own condition. The bone of one thumb was sticking out through the flesh, some ribs were broken, my head was bleeding, and my left foot felt broken. At the time, I didn't realize I was in shock, a state I'd remain in for the next three days.

When I finally reached Bill and lifted him out of the water, I saw he was unconscious. He was bleeding from the chin, his left hand was mangled, and he was badly bruised all over.

We were close to the plane's right wing, which was two feet above water, so I tried to drag Bill atop it. But he weighs 210 and I weigh 170, so it was a struggle. Three times I got him onto the wing only to see him roll back into the water. The fourth time he stayed. To make sure, I tied his leg to the inside of the cabin with safety belts spliced together.

But I was worried about his condition. I'm a former Navy corpsman, and I've seen shock kill. Luckily, there was some foam padding from the wreckage to wrap around him. Then I started looking around the cabin to see what, if anything, had survived the crash.

One odd thing I noted was that the dome light was still on. But there was little else of use in the wreckage. My watch, along with my glasses and lighter, was gone. I remembered glancing at it as we dropped from the sky—it had been 11:40 p.m. That would have placed us about 25 miles from our take-off point.

But it was the loss of the lighter that frightened me most; if I'd had it, I could've built a signal fire. All that night, I hunted desperately for just one small match.

EXHAUSTED, I SAT DOWN beside my unconscious buddy. Through that long first night, I dozed off in spells. When awake, I felt the cold; it went down to 40, I learned later. Though cold and intermittent rain kept me wet and numb, I was never afraid. Maybe it was the shock that kept fear out of my mind, but I think it was my faith in God and my prayers.

What did bother me, though, were the thousands of alligator eyes that kept a vigil around the plane. The green glow of these eyes is something to see: I could guess how big they were by the distance between the eyes. Some of them were big fellows, 10 feet or more. I'm thankful I didn't know then what I found out later: I was in the major breeding area for alligators!

But I've hunted in the Everglades since I was a kid, so I wasn't really scared. They say that 'gators won't attack unless they get mad. Still, all those silent eyes staring at me wasn't a comfortable feeling. I felt they were waiting for something—for me to give up maybe.

That morning the first search planes came overhead. No matter how I yelled and waved my jacket at them, they flew right on, not seeing us. This was probably one of the worst parts of the whole ordeal, having them miss us simply because they couldn't see our plane.

About noon the first day, I decided to leave Bill on the plane and strike out for help on foot through the swamp. If we were in two different places, I figured, our chances of being found would be twice as good.

The day was overcast, sometimes rainy, as I started out toward the southeast.

I set out, keeping my sports jacket on for warmth (this, I learned later, was a mistake; its color camouflaged me).

I carried with me an aluminum T-shaped pipe from the wreckage, which proved something of a lifesaver.

From the beginning, my journey was hampered by saw grass, which sometimes grows eight feet tall. If you know anything about saw grass, you know it's rough stuff. It tore through my trousers and into my skin, covering me with bloody spots.

Then there was the swamp itself; many times I found myself wading in water up to my shoulders. I felt no pain, however; I wandered in a dazed, semishocked state.

I guess the one thing I feared most was the chance of running into poisonous snakes that inhabit the Everglades—right in the water through which I was wading.

Another trouble that was to haunt me was not being able to sit or lie down. I kept trying to pile up weeds in the water to make a place high enough to rest on. But nothing I tried seemed to work.

A few times I thought I had it made, sitting on a clump of weeds, but I'd doze off and fall into the swamp. The only rest I got the next two days was by sitting on the T-shaped pipe above the swamp, minutes at a time.

All the while, I could see and hear the search planes overhead. I spent so much time yelling and screaming at them that I lost my voice.

I saw no alligators during daylight, but a few times I thought I felt snakes slithering past my legs in the water. I told myself—it's imagination. But I wasn't convinced.

With sunset, I grew really hungry. Birds were everywhere, and I eyed them enviously! I don't know how much energy I wasted trying to hit one of them with my crossbar.

Just before darkness, though, I made a lucky hit. Two small finches fell. Famished, I tore off their feathers and skin and gulped hunks of their meat raw. In my shape, they tasted good!

With night the 'gators came again. What must've been hundreds of them wiggled around me, especially when I stopped to rest on the crossbar. I could hear them talking to each other; "bellowing," it's called. Once again I sensed anticipation as if they were more than casual spectators of my fight for life.

I found myself bellowing back at them, real loud. "Now I'm not going to bother you, and you're not going to bother me. Right?" When they grew too many, however, I decided I'd better move on.

Hallucinations—which I'd experienced the night before—haunted me again my second night in the 'glades.

I recall one. About midnight, standing waist-deep in the swamp, I suddenly saw a house off in the distance, with lights on. A concrete-block fence was around it. I thought: if I could get there, I'd be home safe! But then my head cleared. There was nothing in the distance but more morass. Later, I had more hallucinations, like thinking I could see lights from downtown Miami on the horizon.

By dawn the third day, I knew I had to lie down soon or I wouldn't make it.

PLANE AFTER PLANE CAME OVER but flew right on. I took off my jacket and shirt and tied the latter to a stick. I waved frantically. I yelled. I cried for God.

I put the whole thing in the Lord's hands, praying with all my heart. I knew I could never survive another night in the swamp.

Suddenly, one plane came in at about 200 feet. It circled. They spotted me! I told them who I was by semaphore. Soon a commercial helicopter, piloted by Hal Crooks, landed 100 yards from me. I signaled I couldn't make it to him, so he moved to within 20 yards of where I stood in four feet of water.

I crawled into the cabin and broke out crying.

"I'm sure glad to see you!" I sobbed. Though his earphones kept him from hearing my thanks, he smiled and nodded to me.

At the Homestead Air Force Base Hospital, I learned Bill Lindsey had been picked up four hours earlier at the wreckage. I guess I should have stayed with it, too; but you never know.

Aside from half an inch off my thumb, I recovered fully. Bill—though he had a worse time—seems to be coming along okay now.

But I can still close my eyes and see in the darkness the glowing stare of those alligators—waiting.

With fear in her eyes, the emaciated young woman looked up at the soldier. Then she whispered softly, "We are Jews."

Just an Ordinary Hero

Terror—so great that it had turned the young girl's hair white—could not be forgotten; but a good man's understanding and devotion gave her the will to go on

"TELL THE TRUTH," a cynical friend said to me recently. "Have you ever known a love story in real life that lasted for more than a little while?"

Immediately, I thought of Gerda Klein. Part of her story already has been told in her book, All But My Life—part, but not all.

I first met Gerda in 1954. My own efforts to write had been failing for some time—so I had taken a job at the University of Buffalo trying to teach others to write! One day Gerda arrived at my office and breathlessly asked whether I would help her to write a book.

"What kind of book?" I asked.

"I just want to tell my story and the story of some of those who died. I think I will call it The Day the Clock Stopped."

"The Day the Clock Stopped?" I repeated blankly.

"The day the Germans marched into Warsaw in 1939. One of the first things they did was to stop the church clock near our house."

For an hour, the attractive but extremely nervous woman talked, her story spilling out almost compulsively. She had been put in a concentration camp when she was 16—and had survived. Now from a large knitting bag, she took out a manuscript which she had been working on for years.

"YOU HAVE TO realize," I cautioned, "that to do your story justice you may have to work for a year or more, and then you may not make any money at all. Can you afford that?"

"Kurt, my husband, has a good job," she replied. "And he says he'll try to take care of the children evenings so I can write."

"You may have to work with a translator," I said. "Your story is great, but you still have a little trouble with written English."

"Kurt is a marvelous translator," she replied. "He says he'll help me when I get my first draft done."

"Good," I went on, "but it's still entirely possible that after working for many months, after putting yourself through the terrible experience of reliving all those dreadful years, we still may not be able to find a publisher for it."

"Kurt says he will publish it if I can write it," she said.

"Is your husband a publisher?" I asked in surprise.

"No, but he's a printer. He has a very small printing business—letterheads and things like that. He says he will set my whole book by hand if necessary."

"I'd like to meet him," I said.

And that evening I did meet Kurt Klein. He was (and is) a slight, handsome, but most unassuming man whose unsentimental view of life would be outraged by the notion that he was playing a part in a true love story of great beauty. But, the truth is, he is.

Gerda met Kurt when the fighting was almost over in Europe. In the Nazis' last days, they marched several thousand Jews toward a camp where they were to be exterminated. Interrupted by the invading Allies, they put some of their victims in a barn and set fuses to blow it up. Then a sort of miracle occurred: a sudden rainstorm put the fuses out.

Gerda was among those saved by the rain. She was 22 at the time, but years of starvation had reduced her weight to 68 pounds—and turned her hair white! With a dozen other living skeletons, she lay in the straw in the barn without the strength to know or care much what was going on.

But the same rainstorm which saved Gerda's life by putting out the fuse also halted a young American soldier who was driving by in a jeep. He sought shelter in the barn and, to his surprise, found Gerda. When he greeted her, she reacted with apprehension: he seemed pleasant—but, she said to herself, maybe he did not yet realize that she and the others were Jews. Six long years under the Nazis had unconsciously made her almost ashamed of what she was.

"May I see the other ladies?" he asked.

"LADIES!" her brain repeated. He must not know, she thought. But it would be better to tell him right away and get it over with.

"We are Jews," she said in a small voice.

His answer came back like thunder: "So am I."

Gerda broke into tears, not only with relief at being saved but with the glory of seeing a strong man with a gun that was meant to protect her, not to threaten or kill her.

The American introduced himself as Kurt Klein, an army interpreter. He had Gerda and the others taken to a hospital and began calling on her, sometimes driving hundreds of miles to see her. She was very sick and almost died. But gradually she recovered and developed into the strikingly beautiful girl she should have been.

Shortly after the war ended in Europe, Kurt proposed to Gerda and brought her to America, away from the whole nightmare of Nazi horror. That was the beginning of the love story. Did they then live happily ever after?

Not exactly. Suffering may ennoble people, but it also has other effects. Gerda had been through six years of as much hell as man has ever devised. She had seen her parents dragged away to the gas ovens ("Be strong!" they called to her from the truck. "Be strong!"). All the rest of her family also had disappeared. Now, at night, she sometimes awoke shivering with memories she couldn't discuss at all. More and more, she was ridden with the obsession that she had to write down her story—if only as a footnote to history. She must write a book to serve as a memorial to those who had died.

But how could she write a book? Her formal education had been interrupted early by the Nazis, and she hardly knew English. She craved children and soon had three to take care of. There was no money for help.

KURT SUGGESTED she go to the local university for advice. Thus my work with Gerda and her book began. When finally published, it was only a mild success in practical terms, but it did provide the memorial Gerda wanted. And it had another effect: it introduced Gerda to the public. With mixed emotions, she discovered that once the public finds an interesting person, it won't let go.

Gerda's career as a lecturer began with a simple request for a charity performance. She was scared, but the opportunity to help raise money for war orphans could not be turned down. Trembling, she got up before 500 people and told about her years of hell.

Today she has conquered her nervousness and is in great demand as a speaker at benefits for war orphans, old people's homes, and hospitals in which the wounded lie. She cannot say no. Often near the end of her emotional strength, she goes on tour after tour, visiting all parts of the country.

And Kurt? He keeps the home fires burning in Buffalo. He says he's proud to have such a famous wife. And if you tell him he's part of a great love story, you'll get an embarrassed grin. Kurt's an intelligent man, but, like most men, he doesn't think very objectively about his past. Gerda, he says, has had a remarkable life, but he sees nothing romantic about himself at all.
